Lindbergh 1927-1932
Money Made Quickly
The Unborn Mouse Skin
Do You Know the Words?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

FIVE YEARS AGO yesterday, Col. Lindbergh started his flight across the ocean. You know now his country's crime wave has rewarded him.

The question is, can anything, even the hideous murder of a child, persuade this country to do something about its bootlegcrime form of government?

Testimony before the Senate banking and currency committee shows that you can make money rapidly in Wall Street, if you know how. One little group, operating a pool in radio stock, made five million dollars in a week.

A big concern paid $23,500,000 to another concern, that represented a total investment of $1,750,000, and $90,000,000 worth of a certain stock, with a well known name back of it, was sold to the public at $52 a share. It is worth $1 a share now.

The financial answer to the question: "Where are the snows of yesteryear?" Is "they have melted."

From the skin of an embryonic baby mouse, so small that it isn't born yet, scientists at the Rockefeller Institute take a substance that stops cancerous growth in a full sized mouse. Rockefeller scientists, constantly fighting disease, discover in the skin of unborn mammals, including ourselves, a substance that regulates growth, not only in cancers, but all growth, compelling a finger, or an arm, for instance, to stop growing, when it is just the right length.

We are truly "fearfully and wonderfully made."

While Rockefeller Institute scientists fight cancer with unborn mouse skin, scientists of the General Electric Co at Schenectady find a way to send "a secret voice on a beam of light" from an airship to the ground. No enemy could pick up that message, as radio messages can be picked up. In war, airships could send information to the earth in safety.

The light comes to a mirror on the ground, and a photoelectric cell "transforms the light-borne frequencies into sound and voice" with sufficient energy to be sent broadcast.

Congressman Fuller of Arkansas says every civil service employe should prove his ability to "sing, recite or write from memory" the words of the Star-Spangled Banner. He must know them all by heart.

Does President Hoover know by heart all the words of that estimable song? Does Congressman Fuller know them? What percentage of the Senate and Senate members know them?

A popular song says those words are known only to the Armenians and the Greeks.

The stock market heard that a powerful financial group, including Owen D. Young, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., Charles E. Mitchell, Walter C. Teagle, Clarence M. Woolley and others, will undertake to start the flow of money through the arteries of business. At that news, the little stocks went up as soon as the exchange opened.

A little encouragement puts them up, but, alas, they go down so easily, and stay down so long. The London Times says it's all our fault for accumulating so much gold.

President Butler of Columbia University says Jefferson's Democratic party and Lincoln's Republican party are both dead, and if thoughtful people had a real leader to follow they would "sweep our whole discredited political machinery into the dust heap."

Dr. Butler wants a third party.

Questions for Dr. Butler: First, how many "thoughtful people" are there?

Second, what good would a third party do among citizens 50 per cent of whom will not take the trouble to vote?

Russia, not willing to be found unprepared if war comes, is training not only men, but also women and children, in the use of firearms. In addition, millions of young Russians study aeronautics, in preparation for flying, and thousands are trained as actual fliers.

In Switzerland, every able-bodied man is taught to use a gun, possesses one, and, at intervals, must prove that it is in good working order and that he still knows how to use it.

Uncle Sam might train 20,000 or more young Americans as pilots, paying them for their time, summoning them once in so often to prove that they are still able to fly. We shall need pilots some day.

Advocates of birth control ask Congress to legalize distribution of contraceptive information, at the first hearing, since 1872, when birth control information was declared illegal.

Birth control could be made useful if morons and semi-morons could be persuaded to use it. But they will not take the trouble, and the others, as a rule, have too few children as it is.

'I MADE IT!' CRIES FIRST WOMAN EVER TO FLY SEA ALONE

Culmore, Ulster, Ireland, May 21—Amelia Earhart Putnam brought down her red and gold monoplane in a field on the Donegal side of Lough Foyle this afternoon and thereby became the first woman flier ever to fly the Atlantic alone.

She landed on this side of the ocean five years to the day after Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at Le Bourget, France, successfully completing the first solo flight across the Atlantic by a man.

The distance is about 2000 miles and her time was 15 hours and 39 minutes.

"I've done it," Mrs. Putnam exclaimed when she got out of her ship.

She had intended to go to Paris but it was necessary to cut the flight short because her exhaust manifold had burned out and the gasoline gauge was broken, causing a little leakage.

Cables Own Word to U. S. After She 'Hitch Hikes'

The lithe, blonde flier, who took off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, at 4:51 p. m., E. S. T., yesterday, found herself alone when she dropped her plane down on the field at Culmore after her adventurous trip.

She walked a short distance to the nearest road and hailed a passing motorist, thus becoming the

The assault occurred Monday in the Curtin home, Westbourne ter., Brookline. Mrs. Curtin was the complainant.

MRS. PEABODY IN 'DRY' TOWN

Danvers' claim to being the driest town in America was further enhanced today with the revelation that Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, known as the nation's most ardent exponent of prohibition, has taken up residence here.

Over a year ago Mrs. Peabody announced she was disgusted with enforcement in and around her Beverly home and departed for Florida expecting to find that State dry. But Florida also proved moist—only more so.

So Mrs. Peabody, hearing of Chief of Police John T. McDewell of Danvers and his herculean efforts to bail out this town, moved into the John Greanleaf Whittier estate. She is reported as saying the town is measuring up to her hopes for a dry paradise.

"About four hours after leaving Newfoundland," Mrs. Putnam explained later, "I noticed flames from the exhaust and became very uneasy, but it would have taken four hours to get back and I thought it safer to go ahead."

Her plane was not damaged.

Soon afterward she issued this statement:

"To my friends in New York I want to send this message:

"I am very glad to have come across successfully, but I am sorry indeed I did not make France. I am going to speak to my husband as soon as I can by the Atlantic phone."

Arriving in Londonderry, Mrs. Putnam thanked the motorist and walked into a post office where she put in her telephone call and cabled word to the United States of her safe arrival.

Her Speed in Crossing Atlantic Probably Sets Another Record

Later she returned to the field and looked over her plane, which will be dismantled and shipped to London.

The difficulty with the exhaust manifold and with the gasoline gauge developed about four hours out of Harbor Grace, Mrs. Putnam said, but she decided to stick to it rather than turn back. There was hardly any gasoline left in the tank when she landed.

Flying on that occasion as a passenger, Mrs. Putnam and her companions flew blind for some hours, eventually descending on the waters of an estuary at Burry Port, a tiny town in North Wales.

It was some hours before the world knew that the venture was successful.

The aviatrix landed her plane in a field near Culmore, five miles from Londonderry at 2:30 p. m. (9:30 a. m. E. D. T.)

She thus covered the 2000 miles in approximately 15 hours and 39 minutes, an amazing speed, probably the fastest ever recorded on a transatlantic journey.

Approximately 14 hours of Mrs. Putnam's ocean flight were over the water, in comparison with 20 hours hours taken by Col. Lindbergh to bridge the 1800 miles between Harbor Grace and the coast of Ireland.

"It was a much greater thrill than my other flight," she said, referring to her crossing in 1928 as a passenger aboard the seaplane Friendship.

"This time the responsibility was all mine.

"I had to do everything myself.

"I wasn't at all hurt in landing, and I don't think my plane has been damaged.

She Carried Only Quart of Soup on Her 2000-Mile Trip to Europe

"With slight adjustments, I imagine I could continue on without any difficulty, but maybe I'll drop down to London instead of flying to Paris."

As Amelia Earhart, Mrs. Putnam became the first woman to cross the Atlantic in an airplane when, with the late Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, navigator, she flew in the monoplane Friendship from Newfoundland to the coast of Wales.

Her plane is not equipped to land on the water, and carries no radio. Navigation instruments are of the simple type.

"You don't want to eat much on these trips," she told reporters.

Twenty minutes before her departure she visited the airport to make sure everything was right with her plane. That 420 gallons of fuel—enough to keep her out of the ocean for 25 hours—were aboard.

Engines then started warming up the engine. Mrs. Putnam returned to Harbor Grace. There she received a weather report from the Cape Race station that sent her rushing back to the field.

There was a few minutes' conversation with Balchen, hurried last-minute advice. Then Mrs. Putnam turned to waiting newspaper men, stating calmly:

"I'm going to try it now."

Once in the cockpit, there was no hesitancy. Mrs. Putnam gave her ship the gun, smiled and waved her hand at the small knot of onlookers, and raced her plane down the field.

The plane climbed skyward to the echo of cheers and a lone woman was out to do what the lone Lindbergh did five years ago.

"She'll make it."

This was Balchen's only comment as he watched Mrs. Putnam's plane gradually swallowed up by the light fog that curtailed the ocean.

Ireland Wildly Acclaims Woman Who Dared Ocean Perils and Won!

When she had finished cabling the news home, she sought out the nearest hotel "to wash my face and powder my nose."

Inside of a few moments, news of the courageous aviatrix's safe landing had spread throughout Londonderry, a city of 50,000 people, and the streets outside her hotel were soon jammed with residents anxious for a glimpse of her.

Local dignitaries swarmed into the hotel to make sure that everything was being done for the unexpected but welcome guest. Telephone calls, cablegrams and telegraph messages from all over the world flowed in within an hour after her arrival, severely taxing local facilities.

"It really was a most terrifying as well as thrilling experience," she said. "It was the most thrilling I ever had. I would gladly go through it again.

"When I landed, I didn't know exactly where I was beyond the fact that it was Ireland.

"For a few moments I was alone—a strange feeling after flying alone for hours with nothing but the noise of my engine for company.

"And then the silence was broken by the welcoming shouts of a kindly Irish farmer who had seen me land and came running to greet me.

"'Hallo, hallo. Greetings. How are you feeling?' he shouted to me.

"His name was Henry Gallagher, a kindly old man if there ever was one. I wanted to throw my arms around his neck when he reached up and helped me down from my plane.

"He told me the place I landed was known as Ballymaggard near Culmore. It was about four miles from Londonderry by air and a little farther by road."

"Are you hungry?" someone asked.

"I haven't thought about eating," she said.

"During the last half of the flight, I must confess I was a little worried," she went on. "I was afraid the leak in the gasoline tank might become serious, and when I once got over Ireland, I decided to play safe and come down instead of gambling on the tank holding out as far as Paris."

AMELIA ANSWERS CRITICS

By WIN BROOKS

Nobody ever again will say "Two boys flew her across the Atlantic and she hogged all the credit."

Amelia Earhart Putnam has answered her critics.

When, last night, alone and with less than 24 hours advance notice to the public, she took off for Paris from Harbor Grace, N. F., her publisher-husband, George Palmer Putnam, said: "Merely a sporting venture."

That phrase has been used to characterize all manner of feats on land and sea and in the air, but it never was so aptly termed as in this instance.

I may be wrong but I don't believe the driving force behind Amelia's latest venture was the glory awaiting the first woman to span the Atlantic, solo, by air.

TO JUSTIFY HERSELF

I don't think she flew with the hope and expectation that the world would point to her and say: "That's Amelia Earhart Putnam, the first woman to fly alone across the ocean."

I think she flew so nobody ever again would say: "That's Amelia Earhart, the girl who got all the credit for a great flight made by Dusty Stultz and Lou Gordon."

The people have said that. For four years there has been an undercurrent of feeling, without any foundation in fact, that Amelia wrested the laurels from Stultz and Gordon after their flight to Wales.

I went to New York for the return of Amelia and Dusty and Gordon. I went down the harbor to meet them one hazy morning with a small army of Boston and New York newspapermen.

The ash-blond settlement worker stepped aboard the greeting tug Macom smiling brightly, wearing a chic tailored blue costume and became the center of an admiring group, on the outside of which, helpless and not at all perturbed by not getting any attention, roamed Dusty Stultz and Gordon, the young mechanic.

CENTER OF ATTENTION

Other men had flown the Atlantic but here was the first girl to do it. And what mattered if she was only a passenger?

The newspapermen, of course, centered their attention on Amelia. What were your sensations? Were you afraid? What do you think of the future transatlantic air service? Will you do it again? Are you going to marry that fellow back home?

And so forth and so on. Dusty Stultz, who handled the controls during the flight, sat apart with his beautiful young wife. Young Gordon went to the stern of the boat with the Brookline girl he married shortly afterward.

Nobody paid them much attention and they weren't the sort to mind. Both had realized that if the flight was a success most of the reward and most of the hero-worship would go to the girl.

There was a theater party that night and Amelia was acclaimed. Dusty and Lou were presented as the men who flew with her on the trip. Lou's girl mistook her engagement ring and that was Lou's chief worry for a few minutes.

The next day there was a joint luncheon of the New York women's clubs and Amelia was the guest of honor, and made an address on aviation. Dusty and Lou weren't even invited.

NOT HER FAULT

George Palmer Putnam, who backed the flight, had a magnificent headquarters set up in the Hotel Biltmore. There were luncheons and fetes and trips to the Putnam estate on Long Island. After a few days you would have thought that Amelia made the flight alone.

But there wasn't any of Amelia's fault. She was always loyally careful to stress the point that there had been a minor part in the flight—that Stultz and Gordon did the work.

You can't divert hero worship, however, and she continued to get the major share of the reward. A short time later she was unfortunate enough to crack up a plane, and a little reaction set in and "our grapers" began to say that Amelia wasn't much of a flier, anyway, and she was hogging all the credit. I think it was with men rather than with women that this feeling persisted.

Certain people prominent in aviation felt that Amelia was a little too much in the foreground, and the two men a lot too far in the background.

Then Dusty Stultz, who was as happy and carefree a soul as ever flew, crashed a plane on Long Island and died. And the papers referred to him as the pilot of the plane in which Amelia Earhart flew to Wales.

FOR PAST'S REWARD

Then the George Palmer Putnams were divorced and Amelia hitched the boy she left behind and Putnam and Amelia were married—and the public re-action to that didn't help.

Society took her up and other aviatrixes called her high-hat and there was a feeling of resentmen.

And all the time that phrase was growing and growing:

She must have felt it, even if she never heard it. She is a keenly sensitive girl despite a temperment devoid of surface emotion.

So where once she had quite frankly gambled her life for her own and her family's fortune, she decided to stake it this time to justify the reward she had already collected, and not for any reward of the future.

Nobody ever doubted her courage but some folks have doubted her flying ability and that doubt, too, she has forever laid. It really was a sporting venture, I think, and one of the finest ever attempted.

'WE KNEW SHE'D WIN,' AMELIA'S KIN EXCLAIM

Happy Mother and "Kid" Sister Rejoice When She Arrives in Ireland

"We knew she would do it and she has done it."

Amelia Earhart-Putnam's gray-haired mother and "kid sister" issued that joint statement today on receipt of the news she had spanned the Atlantic alone and brought her plane down at Londonderry, Ire.

FAMILY CONFIDENT

Very calm and very confident they had awaited for the second time in four years news of the result of a transatlantic flight embarked upon by the former Boston settlement worker.

At their home, 118 Trainerort, Medford, last night, they retired at their usual hour, they slept their usual good sleep, they arose at their usual time, and went about their usual household duties, entirely unruffled.

MENTIONED IT CASUALLY

The "kid sister," who is Mrs. Muriel Earhart Morrissey, former Medford school teacher, revealed this morning while waiting for news, that Amelia had spent last week-end with her and her mother, Mrs. Amy O. Earhart.

Underneath a surface of commonplaces and banter, the visit was something in the nature of a farewell in case the flight should fail.

"She spoke about her contemplated solo flight," Mrs. Morrissey said, "but if you know Amelia you know that all she did was to mention it casually."

"We feel that she is a competent flier," the sister said. "She made her plans long since. She knew what she was about.

"Of course this flight was a little different from her first one over the Atlantic. When she flew before the plane was equipped with pontoons for landing on the water. This ship was equipped only for land."

"It goes without saying that we are delighted that she has landed safely," said Mrs. Morrissey. "It means a lot to mother that she has reached dry land, even if she did not get to Paris as she wished. Any landing is good."

"Is she going on?"

At the time of aviatrix's landing found Mrs. Morrissey caring for her two children, David, 3 years old, and Amy, nine months. The flier's 72-year-old mother was warming milk for the baby when she received word that her daughter was safe.

Amelia Has Soup And Only $20

Culmore, Ulster, Ireland, May 21 (AP)—Amelia Earhart Putnam took no food on her flight from Harbor Grace except tomato juice. And she landed almost broke—for the time being.

"I have only $20 in United States money in my possession," she said. "That was handed to me as I was leaving. I haven't even a check to sign."

"You needn't worry about that," said Mr. Gallagher, owner of the field in which she landed. "I will see you through."

WARNER MADE TEN MILLION IN MARKET

Movie Magnate Tells Committee He Played Long and Short in Own Stock

Washington, May 21 (INS) A $10,000,000 profit from playing the market in the stock of his own company, Warner Brothers Pictures, were explained at the Senate's inquiry into speculation today by Harry M. Warner, motion picture magnate.

Warner admitted playing the market long and short in his own stock. He profited on both sides.

"HONEST POOLS"

Before Warner took the stand, Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa asked William A. Gray, committee counsel, to secure from Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, a list of "honest pools."

"You recall that Mr. Whitney testified that he knew of no pools," said Gray.

"I thought he recovered from that spell of ignorance," Brookhart replied.

The committee then directed Gray to find out whether Whitney knew of any "honest syndicates or pools." Meanwhile, Gray announced the committee's investigators had secured the records of some 50 or 60 pools.

WARNER UNCERTAIN

Warner first explained he had been in motion pictures for 28 years after starting out in the "shoe business" as a shoemaker, working for my father."

"Have you made money out of the picture business?"

"We have made money out of it."

"More than in handling stocks?"

"I say, everything we made, we made out of the development of the motion picture business."

Warner appeared uncertain about details of the formation of his company and was permitted to confer with his secretary and with his attorney.

CAPITAL INCREASED

Warner said the company first issued 550,000 shares of no-par value stock in 1925. In 1928, when his concern acquired the Stanley Corp., its capitalization was increased to 7,500,000 shares.

Out of the first stock issue 200,000 shares were sold in 1926 through Goldman-Sachs & Co.

Senator Glass (D.) of Virginia, interrupted to ask what this interrogation would develop.

Fluid Obtained from Skin Checks Cancerous Growth

THREE GIRLS RECEIVING THEIR FIRST COMMUNION

PASTOR EXPLAINS URGE THAT MADE HIM HUG GIRLS

HEARTS FLEW WITH AMELIA

Mrs. Albert Morrisey of Medford, sister of Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, who flew from Harbor Grace to Culmore, near Londonderry, Ireland, in a projected hop to Paris, felt no anxiety whatever about the aviatrix. Today she worked in her garden.

Mrs. Amy O. Earhart, 118 Traincroft st., Medford, who waited for the flash through the air that told her that her daughter, Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, had landed safely.

SHOUTS CURSES AT DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Defendant in Gas Station Murder Stages a Wild Outburst in Court

After creating a scene in Middlesex Superior Court by cursing Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe, Herman "Red" Snyder, co-defendant in the Kiley murder trial, in a surprise move, refused to take the stand in his own defense today.

Snyder's refusal to testify came after he had listened quietly to an explanation of his rights by Judge Hammond, during the absence of the jury from the courtroom.

NEED NOT TESTIFY

The move came as a surprise even to the defendant's counsel, Atty. Abraham C. Weber, who, in his opening yesterday, said his client would deny to the jury that he shot James M. Kiley, Somerville filling station manager, or that he had the murder pistol.

"You have a right to take the stand and testify here," said Judge Hammond, as Snyder stood up in the dock, "and you have the constitutional right to remain silent. If you take the stand of course you will be subjected to cross-examination by the district attorney.

"If you do not take the stand the jury, of course, will be instructed that they are to draw no inference from that fact. I can't tell you what to do. Do I make it clear?"

"Yes, sir, you do," replied Snyder. "I refuse to take the stand."

CLASH WITH VOLPE

Snyder's outbreak occurred earlier in the session when he leaped to his feet in a rage.

"None of your —— business," he shouted, as Volpe pressed Amiel Dantzinger, defense witness, for the reason he had not gone upstairs on a day he went to see Snyder's mother.

Flung back into his chair by a court officer, Snyder's face crimsoned, and he bit his lips and trembled as he fought for control.

The dramatic scene electrified the crowded courtroom where Snyder and John A. Donnellon are on trial, charged with the murder of James M. Kiley, Somerville filling station manager.

REFUSES TO ANSWER

Dantzinger had been called to testify to peculiar actions on the part of Snyder, for whom an insanity plea is to be made.

Over and over again Volpe tried to get Dantzinger to tell the court and jury why he had failed to go upstairs on an occasion when he went to the Snyder home.

Dantzinger refused to answer, and then came Snyder's outbreak.

After being put back in his chair, Snyder subsided and the trial went on.

HINTS AT ROMANCE

Volpe turned to Dantzinger and asked:

"Is that the way that fellow acts when anybody crosses him up?"

"Oh, worse," was the reply.

The existence of a romance between Mrs. Rose Snyder, mother of the defendant, and John Angoff, unemployed tailor, was hinted at by Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe during the cross-examination of Angoff, the next witness.

Angoff had testified that he saw Snyder in fits of epilepsy, and that he acted peculiarly.

"That's a fact," he was asked by Volpe, "that you are going to marry Mrs. Snyder, mother of this boy?"

CAN'T SUPPORT HIMSELF

With a shrug of the shoulders and a shake of the head Angoff replied:

"Oh, I couldn't marry her; she is the mother of seven children."

He denied he had ever told an alienist or a social worker that he planned to marry Mrs. Snyder.

"What's the use?" Angoff said. "I can't marry any woman today. I can't support myself."

The jurors hearing the case told Judge Hammond they had decided they would prefer to sit through the regular court hours today in order to expedite the trial. Judge Hammond then ordered a regular session for today.

GARRICK ACCUSES SNYDER

Called as the State's star witness, Garrick told the jury that Synder held the gun which fired the fatal shot. He said he gave the gun to Snyder. He said he heard Snyder say:

"Come on let's get out of here. I just killed a fellow. It was an accident. The gun went off in my hand."

Also, he testified that he saw the gun in Snyder's hand when Donnellon and Snyder rushed out of the gas station after the shooting.

'NERVOUSNESS' IS EXCUSE OF 'LOVE RECTOR'

Unable to Keep His Hands or Feet Still, British Cleric Tells Court

London, May 21 (INS)—The "nervousness" which prompted Rev. Harold Francis Davidson to put his arms around young girls was brought out today at the continuation of his trial on charges of immorality.

Resuming the witness stand to refute charges of immoral conduct with a score of London tea shop waitresses and actresses, the 60-year-old rector of Stiffkey Church, Norfolk, engaged in a slight tiff with the chancellor presiding at the trial.

The pastor's assistant counsel, Ryder Richardson, asked:

"It is suggested that you are nervous and use your hands a great deal," Richardson said. "It is usual for you to touch people, is it not?"

"I have restrained myself constantly from touching the chancellor," Davidson declared.

LOVE IN A MOTOR CAR

"You had better not," the chancellor warned.

The rector denied putting his arm around Miss Winifred Wain, an actress whom he took on a motor trip.

"You couldn't do it in a motor car like that if you were sitting decently," Davidson said.

"Were you in anything but a decent position?"

"Certainly not."

TOUCHED WAITRESSES

Questioned concerning testimony of Mrs. Mary Osborne, a rooming house proprietress, who charged he brought pretty girls to his flat, Rev. Mr. Davidson said:

"She never objected when she was taken. When she had a little too much to drink she would get unpleasant."

He denied Mrs. Osborne's charge that he had changed his clothes while Rose Ellis, one of the girls with whom he is accused of having improper relations, was in the flat.

"I went out for a sandwich while I changed," he said.

The rector admitted he might have touched waitresses on the arm while waiting for a cup of tea, but said he intended nothing immoral.

"Did you tell Dorothy Starn (a waitress who testified against Davidson) that she had lovely eyes?" counsel asked.

"I might have told her that and suggested she would have success in the films if she got them over," he replied.

A GIRLS' DRESSING ROOM

Rev. Mr. Davidson admitted going into the girls' dressing room in a London music hall, but explained the visits were in connection with his work as chaplain to the Actors' Church Union.

"It was my duty," he said. "There was nothing immoral in it."

"Do you know a large number of waitresses," he was asked.

"At least four or five hundred," he replied blandly. "Some of them I know exceedingly well. I take an especial interest in waitresses because of their low pay. I thought that might affect the kind of a life a pretty girl might lead."

The rector admitted, however, that his interest in waitresses resulted in difficulties with the managers of restaurants. He recounted how he received 200 pounds damages because a member of the staff of a big teashop chain assaulted him and then ordered him not to enter any of their establishments again.

FIGHT DENIED IN HAWAII TRIAL

Honolulu, May 21 (AP)—Rumors of friction—quickly denied—among law enforcement officers over the prosecution of four men accused of criminally attacking Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of a naval lieutenant, were accompanied today by hints that Public Prosecutor John C. Kelley might resign. A jury disagreed at the first trial.

Kelley, who has insisted on another trial even though Mrs. Massie has left the islands, has said he will retry the case if he remains prosecutor. He has displayed annoyance at the action of Governor Lawrence M. Judd, who commuted to one hour the sentences of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie and three others convicted of slaying Joseph Kahahawai, one of Mrs. Massie's alleged attackers.

Atty.-Gen. Harry Hewitt, whose name was linked with Kelley's in rumors there was friction over the retrial case in both the prosecutor's office and that of the Attorney-General, said there had been no disagreement.

5 WIVES TRACED AS MAN IS HELD

Athens, O., May 21 (AP)—The same matrimonial agency that served the late Harry Powers, the West Virginia "Bluebeard," was blamed by authorities today for the trouble in which George N. Stevens, 53, finds himself.

Stevens is charged with having five wives, all of whom he met, the police said, through the American Friendship Society, a matrimonial agency, now out of business.

Michigan authorities said they were told Stevens' wives included Blanche Buren of Athens, Mrs. Lulu E. Burke of Plainwell, Mich., Mrs. Cora Hamilton of Union City, Mich., Mrs. Una Liggett of Magnetic Springs, O., and an unidentified woman in Oberlin, O.

Stevens, arrested here yesterday, also was charged with the theft of an automobile in South Bend, Ind., and was alleged to have defrauded several of the women of jewelry and money. The bigamy complaint was made by Mrs. Burke, who said she married him in September, 1931, and he deserted her a month later, taking $11 and a checkbook.

Stevens will be returned to Michigan.

Army in a Bad Way Here, But It Can Still Salute

Boston army circles, struck by the government economy wave, today took stock of its personnel—and found a salute squad.

Since 1867 the army never had trouble in saluting foreign guests.

But—came the news that the French warship Ville d'Ys will steam into the harbor next Thursday.

The French get "first shot" at the salute. The Ville d'Ys will boom out 21 guns in honor of her visit.

The reduced army must answer within a minute after the last shot is fired.

That was the problem that confronted army officials, with a force of three caretakers at the official saluting station.

It fell to the lot of Col. Walter S. Grant, chief of staff, and Maj. Lester M. Wheeler of the intelligence service, to solve the problem.

So—

A detail will be garnered from Fort Banks in Winthrop. Major Wheeler said today.

"We have enough men in the harbor defenses to man salute squads and the French warship will be properly saluted," he said.

"It is true that Fort Strong has been the official saluting station since 1867, but is now manned by only three caretakers.

"But arrangements will be made with Fort Banks for a squad to carry out the work. The matter certainly will be cared for."

THIEF 'EXCUSES' SELF, LEAVES

Brockton, May 21—A "gentleman" prowler who when discovered at work politely excused himself and left, was reported today to police by Mrs. Louise Rautenberg, Newbury st., whose home was entered early today.

Mrs. Rautenberg awoke when she heard someone prowling around in the kitchen. Believing it to be one of the household, she inquired:

"Who is there?"

A wait of about two minutes and the "gentleman" replied:

"I am." Then very hastily, "I must be in the wrong house."

FOUR RESCUED IN LYNN FIRE

A father, two sons and a daughter, overcome by smoke, were rescued by police and firemen early today in a Lynn tenement police afterwards found a beer plant in operation.

Samuel Rosinsky, 38, Benjamin, 23, William, 22, and Ida, 24, were trapped on the top floor of the six-family house in Neptune st., two floors above the apartment in which the plant was discovered.

All apartments except Rosinsky's and another on the other side of the fire were vacant.

The beer plant was found directly over a block of ashes. Other residents said they did not know who hired the flat.

Advocates Union of Presbyterians

Denver, Col., May 21 (AP)—A plan of union looking to establishment of organic relations between the Presbyterian church in the United States of America and the United Presbyterian church of North America was advocated in a statement by Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, published today in advance of the 144th general assembly of the former body next week.

Wallershausen, Germany, May 21 (AP)—Police reinforcements from Gotha re-established order this morning following riots in which two persons were killed and 19 wounded, seven of them policemen. Gov. Bill Calls Aid 'D-- Fool'

Hudson, N. Y., May 21 (AP)—Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma continued today the guest of New York State, although there was a "revolt" against his state program right in the State House at Oklahoma City. He made plain he would not be hurried home by the work of Acting Gov. Robert Burns who yesterday lifted martial law in the oil fields.

He dismissed word of Burns' act with "Oh, he's just a damn fool. I'll take care of that when I get back."

So today he will hang Oklahoma's flag with the colors of the other 47 states in the old block house on Saratoga battlefield, and then he plans to go to New York city for a day or two and then home.

"Alfalfa Bill" was the invited guest of the annual Hudson valley apple blossom festival.

Swift Testifies in Stock-Selling Probe

Atty. James M. Swift of Fall River, former attorney-general of Massachusetts, was the final witness today before the Suffolk County grand jury in its probe of stock selling activities of the New England Investment Shares Corporation of Boston.

Swift and Atty. Edmund Talbot were among the officials indicted by the grand jury a year ago in connection with stock sales. Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner later quashed the indictments.

OFFICER DIES AT 'FRAT' DANCE

Columbus, O., May 21 (INS)—The body of a policeman was found early today in the Beta Theta Pi fraternity house at Ohio State University here following a fraternity dance.

It was believed the policeman Patrolman C. L. Keller, may have been a victim of a heart attack. Coroner Edward Smith said no act of violence had been committed.

Members of the fraternity were held in the house, pending an investigation from which newspaper reporters were barred.

Wine Ankle Deep in Streets of City

Santa Rosa, Cal., May 21 (INS)—An explosion of ammonia tanks here today shook Santa Rosa and fire that followed the blast destroyed a $300,000 cold storage plant.

The fire spread to a government bonded winery and 200,000 gallons of wine, valued at more than $1,000,000, were destroyed. The wine ran ankle deep through the streets.

Priest Says His First Mass for Dying Clinton Mother

Tears—but tears of gratitude.

Dimmed eyes, gazing weakly from what doctors said is her death bed.

And through it all, Mrs. Hannah Joyce saw her son celebrate his first mass today.

Four other sons and a daughter knelt around the dying mother's bed in a little room on Clark st. The Rev. James J. Joyce stood before his mother's bureau.

Flickering candles — flickering even as the life of his mother flickered close by—lighted the improvised altar for the newly ordained Dominican Father.

The life of Mrs. Joyce has been spared in order that she realize the ambition to hear her son's first mass.

She suffered a stroke a week ago.

Children of St. John's parochial school prayed daily that she might realize her ambition. In Washington Fr. Joyce awaited the ordination that was to come Thursday—after 12 years.

Bishop Thomas M. O'Leary of the Springfield diocese granted special dispensation—and the priestly son of Mrs. Joyce came home to his mother's house.

Seemingly inspired by the return of her son, Mrs. Joyce rallied from the semi-coma that has gripped her for a week.

Only the family heard the mass today. John, Anthony, Paul, Martin and Mary, who is now Mrs. Mary Joyce Turkin.

POLICEMAN'S HOME LOOTED

Thieves entered the home of Patrolman Dennis Mahoney of the Joy st. station at 99 West Walnut Park, Roxbury, early today, and stole $415 from a bureau drawer.

Mahoney discovered the break when he returned from duty and noticed the rear bedroom window had been forced. He received the money a short time ago as veterans' compensation.

Special Officer Edward Kirby, of the fingerprint department sent to look for fingerprints, was mistaken for a doctor by another family at the house when he arrived because of the small bag containing instruments which he carried. He entered the other department, where a woman was sick, before he discovered the error.

In Mayfair

—with—

May Christie

(During Betty Alden's absence on a vacation, May Christie, famous English authoress, will write on the activities of society folk.)

NEW YORK, MAY 21—All in a day . . . Up early, and out walking on Park Avenue . . . and that tender shimmer of green, that Spring filigree that laces itself down the center of this famous thoroughfare was never more welcome to the eye . . . a long glisten of verdant shrubbery . . .

So into Central Park at the south end, and round the Japanese Lake, where, in the bright morning sunshine, little boats with happy couples in them were plying back and forth . . .

Romance was in the air. On the Park benches. In those little meandering paths shaded by young beeches. A wistaria tree (was it wistaria, or am I displaying my floral ignorance?) flung showers of lavender petals on its rocky bed . . . itself a bloom of pastel beauty . . .

Young children a-plenty were in the Park . . . darting about like lizards in the sunshine . . .

* * *

Memories of London Parks

THE PARKS in London's Mayfair will be blooming now . . . I have only to close my eyes to see the blaze of rhododendrons along Rotten Row, in every shade of red and purple, in Hyde Park.

And the little hawthorn trees, with the tiny green chairs (set two and two!) under that shower of scented blossom, will be like drifting snow or rosy clouds in the Green Park on Piccadilly . . .

The English park keepers and police are so MUCH more sympathetic to lovers than they are on this side of the Atlantic!

Even those little trees seem to have been planted entirely with a view to courtship . . . for there's just space enough beneath each one for two "twopenny" chairs" and uninterrupted dalliance, of course . . . and the hawthorn droops so, it's like a big enveloping umbrella, affording privacy . . .

* * *

Ablaze With Flowers

ST. JAMES' PARK is directly across Pall Mall and in front of Buckingham Palace. It is ablaze just now with flowers . . . every variety . . . growing all around its lake where the long-legged storks and beautiful wild fowl flutter or hop up to you to be fed . . .

Regent's Park is perhaps lovelliest of all in London's Mayfair, with its wooded islands, canoes and creeks, and its riot of flowering trees . . . including lovely St. Dunstan's, where the soldiers, blinded in the World War, learn to be happy . . . to acquire a trade . . . to row on the lake . . . I have often watched them there . . .

* * *

Nobility in Rompers

KENSINGTON GARDENS, with its Round Pond, is the haunt of prim English nurses with the beautiful offspring of English nobility . . .

Lovely little toddling Lords and Ladies . . . baby Viscounts . . . three-year-old "Honorables" . . . the aristocratic-featured children of Dukes and Duchesses, rolling their hoops . . . sailing their little boats . . . chasing each other . . . their nurses over and over admonishing them to good manners in their play.

The lovely little Royal Princess Elizabeth, six years old, her chubby legs in gaiters and her curly blonde head bare to the sunshine goes there bare to the sunshine goes there daily. There are only two lives between this little child and the Throne of England . . . that of her uncle, the Prince of Wales, and that of her father, the Duke of York . . .

* * *

Gay Paris Gardens

DON'T let me talk about the French Parks . . . the boulevards gay with the rosy blossoms of the horse-chestnuts at this moment, or I shall weep from very nostalgia . . .

The "Jardin du Luxembourg," in the heart of Paris, is a riot of scented flowers just now, and greenery . . .

The "Jardin des Tuileries," close to the Cirillon and the Ritz Hotels, has all its funny little stalls doing a sprightly trade under the tall old trees that have been there for centuries.

And the "Bois," with its mirror-like "lac" among the pines, is full of canoes and pleasure-boats . . . and the wild strawberry plants that grow in profusion . . .

* * *

Tea at the Warwick

LET me come back to New York . . . and the delightful "tea" given in the Warwick Hotel, by that very popular couple, Mr. and Mrs. Ned K. Galland, Jr. . . .

HIGHLIGHTS AT THIS TEA: Mrs. Frank Henderson, in a gay blue dress and hat to match, being greeted by everybody, and telling us about her trip to California . . . and what a good time she had there . . . and the good-looking and vivacious Betty always has a splendid time wherever she goes . . . so this is no news to us . . .

* * *

Her mother, Mrs. Robert C. Faulkner, as vivacious as Betty even if she has achieved four-score-years-and-ten of Youngness . . . warmly kissing the Young Man Who . . .

* * *

MRS. GEORGE WASHINGTON KAVANAUGH holding a little court beside the Warwick on the sidewalk on our arrival . . . and she looked marvelous in a cute tan coat trimmed with light tan fox . . .

(Mrs. Kavanaugh has been quite ill . . . but at this tea she looked the picture of good health.)

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS GALLATIN . . . Dorothy extremely vivacious.

Mr. Gallatin is a most interesting man. He is very well informed on almost every subject. A great reader, I have had several long talks with him . . . I recollect one that went on for hours . . . at the Howard Chandler Christys'.

COL. ROBERT BAKER arriving with his daughter, Annette Havemeyer.

Beaming Countenance

MR. REGINALD BARKER giving us most cordial greeting . . . and how the sun has kissed the countenance of "Reggie" down at Hot Springs!

MR. CHARLES LOUIS SICARD and I whirling around in the dance . . . "Charlie" in excellent spirits . . .

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

LETTER TO A LOVER OF POETRY

DEAR ALICE: You have often asked me to name my favorite American poets. I dislike making out such a list, for one's own taste changes—often within a brief time. A single lyric will reveal a certain singer as above the herd; and so that name should, in all justice, be temperarily included in any tabulation.

There is such an aloof poem to be found in the work of Morris Bishop. It is called "The Puddle." It is as perfect as "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes." Bourdillon's single contribution to it merits enduring fame. And there is that indubitably great sonnet of Lizette Woodworth Reese, "Tears," as fine as anything in our language. Miss Reese has produced other sonnets, many piercingly lovely lyrics; and in the final summing up she would be included in any list I might be tempted to make out.

I could go on naming many others who have written lines that will not perish; but, alas! some of them have also written reams of verse which they themselves may now well wish to discard. No poet can hope always to attain the high standard of his best endeavor. I heard Yeats once say that if one left behind only a page that would live—indeed, only a stanza of two —that would be sufficient reward. And John Masefield has declared that Wordsworth wrote seven perfect poems—and then fell asleep.

* * *

Once in a while a song rings out and we recognize immediately the quality of the poet's voice, just as a singing teacher would be able in an instant that a certain pupil had the same clear tones of a Melba or a Patti. But after the initial burst of song the first thought would be: "Can this divine fire be sustained?" That is a test which few can pass. The sporadic utterance which bears a resemblance to greatness — many have achieved that. Yet, after all, one must prove one's solid worth.

If one swallow does not make a summer, one song does not make a poet, though it may give him the right to approach the arras behind which the greatest poets dwell in mysterious calm and surety.

* * *

I have just been re-reading the late Elinor Wylie's "Collected Poems," issued by Knopf, and something tells me that here was a poet indeed, one whose early promise and later fulfilment have withstood the stern measure of the years.

Her poems now seem even better and nobler, read finally in one embracing volume. They bear the imprint of a sensitive spirit; they are drenched with beauty; they have fire and fury, mixed with passion-ate restraint; and underneath there is a profound philosophy of life and death and love which is sane and steady, and at once august and simple. There is no disorder here. Her words meet with the precision of a flock of sheep in a beautiful green meadow.

The anatomy of her verse is something for you to study. There is an astronomical perfection that you will admire, seeing this bright star set there, and that dim star placed at exactly the proper distance. How she achieved her effects is difficult to say. When she chooses she can be as slender as the young moon or again as glowing as the fiery sun.

Personally I never read "A Strange Story" without a feeling of awe and wonder overcoming me. For there is more than mere fancy in such grim lines; there is a degree of imagination that lifts one into other worlds. I cannot forbear quoting it:

When I died in Berners Street
I remember well
That I had lights at head and feet
And a passing bell.

But when I died in Houndsditch
There came to lay me out
A washerwoman and a witch;
The rats ran about.

When I died in Holborn
In an old house and tall,
I knew the tapestry was torn
And hanging from the wall.

When I died in Marylebone
I was saying my prayers;
There I died all alone
Up three flights of stairs.

But when I died near Lincoln's Inn
The small gold I had
Surrounded me with kith and kin;
I died stark mad.

When I died in Bloomsbury
In the bend of your arm
At the end I died merry
And comforted and warm.

But read too, the 13 noble sonnets which constitute the section headed "Angels and Earthly Creatures," and see if you do not agree with me that they bear the stamp of an almost flawless perfection. Chiseled out of marble they might have been—austere, mighty and terrible —but they have none of the chill of marble. Rather they give out the warmth of human clay, as when the poet cries:

"My Lord, adjudge my strength and set me where
I bear a little more than I can bear."

And so if I ever make out such a list of poets as you have asked for I would be bound to place the name of Elinor Wylie high upon it. It is a pity that she, so beautiful and wise, should have left this world so young—a world which was the richer for having known her lovely presence.

Mrs. Anderson Allows Public to See Weld

The active committee of the Massachusetts Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Children has arranged for the public to be admitted to Mrs. Larz Anderson's estate on Tuesday afternoon, May 24. Mrs. Anderson herself may possibly return from Washington in time to act as hostess at Weld on Aven st.

All in Bloom

Her Japanese dwarf evergreens will immediately catch the horticulturist's eye and rose enthusiasts will congregate in the rose gardens. Cherry and apple orchards in full bloom, an amusing collection of coaches and early automobiles in the stables and the numerous special gardens will keep visitors busy throughout the afternoon.

Faulkner Farm, the Edward G. Bandegee place on Allandale rd. and Mrs. Henry G. Lapham's formal garden at 514 Warren st. should also attract their full quota.

In Concord, Mrs. Elliott Wulsin has interested a group of residents in the opening of four gardens on Friday afternoon, May 27. Those who are assisting Mrs. Wulsin include Mrs. John Buttrick, Mrs. Henry Thompson, Mrs. Walter K. Shaw, Mrs. Nicolas Stevens, Mrs. Charles W. Cheney, Mrs. Robert Bowen, Mrs. Henry Cleveland, Mrs. Robert Goodwin, Mrs. Ralph Emerson, Mrs. Stedman Buttrick, Jr., Mrs. Henry A. Laughlin, Miss Molly Harlow and Miss Mary Cleveland.

A Rock Garden

Mrs. Russell Robb has consented to open her hilltop home on Monument rd. A mossy rock garden and little pool combine to make this garden the most charming in that vicinity.

On the Concord river and commanding a lovely view of it are the adjoining gardens of Mrs. Sherman Hoar and Mrs. Stedman Buttrick, Jr. Their air of dignity and careful cultivation results from the fact that the Buttricks have owned this land since pre-revolutionary days.

The orchard on Mrs. Alfred Curtis's place is a mass of dainty blossoms and hundreds of bulbs are flowering in the nearby garden.

MURDER AND RIOT SHOW HUMANITY MORE CIVILIZED

—By GILBERT SELDES—

HALF A DOZEN black-letter headlines a day in the newspapers, all of them dealing with appalling violence, have made the past week an inferno to sensitive minds. Assassination in France, murder in New Jersey, assassination again in Japan, murderous riots in India—one would say that the stench of blood is rising from the earth with the spring, and that human beings are intoxicated by it to more murder and violence. Yet the thing to remember is that these things are news; it would be appalling if they occurred, as at times in human history they have occurred, without causing any comment, without offending the conscience of the nations. We haven't made progress to the point of ending murder, but we have put an end to the attitude of mind in which murder was merely a matter of passing interest.

GILBERT SELDES

I have always remembered Forbes-Robertson declaiming a beautiful passage in Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," and have looked it up to see whether the nobility lay in his voice or in Shaw's text. I think it is in the text no less than in the delivery. Cleopatra has just had Pothinus, who offended and opposed her, put to death, and, when Caesar protests, she defends herself:

Cleopatra (vehemently): Listen to me, Caesar. If one man in all Alexandria can be found to say that I did wrong, I want to have myself crucified on the door of the palace by my own slaves.

Caesar: If one man in all the world can be found, now or forever, to know that you did wrong, that man will have either to conquer the world as I have, or be crucified by it. (The uproar in the streets again reaches them.) Do you hear? These knockers at your gates are also believers in vengeance and stabbing. You have slain their leader—it is right that they shall slay you. If you doubt it, ask your four counsellors here. And then in the name of that right (he emphasizes the word with great scorn) shall I not slay them for murdering their queen, and be slain in my turn by their countrymen as the invader if their fatherland? Can Rome do less than then slay these slayers, too, to show the world how Rome avenges her sons and her honor? And so, to the end of history, murder shall breed murder, always in the name of right and honor and peace, until the gods are tired of blood and create a race that can understand.

Threat of Suicide

I received, the other day, a letter from a man who said that he would wait until Friday, and then, if he did not hear from me, he would commit suicide. The letter reached me four days after the Friday he meant, and a moral problem was taken out of my hands. The letter was, I am convinced, genuine; it was certainly moving. It told the story of a man with a largish family, a sick mother, a small business, who had always been straight, but in the past two years had gambled (playing numbers, I gather) and lost $2000. He had to close his shop. He never made clear what he wished me to do.

I have never felt that suicide was the crime which the law insists it is; from the time of the Stoics there have been men who have made away with themselves, and, when you consider how vastly Socrates might have escaped, you may call his death suicide also and understand its great dignity. Once I helped to save a man who had planned suicide, and then, perhaps by accident, taken too much of a sleeping powder. He had spoken a great deal too much of honor and obligation, and when he was rescued and swore he had meant to die, I asked him how he had intended to pay his debts. He answered that he cancels all obligations, which seems fair enough, if death isn't deliberately sought in order to get out of debt.

But from that time I have felt deeply that a man may have the right to kill himself, but he hasn't the right to use his suicide as a threat over others. It is like any other threat—if it is carried out, nothing is won, and if it is not carried out, a great deal is lost.

ENTIRE TOWN UNITES FOR CHILD

Massachusetts is about to conduct an interesting experiment. The town of Sterling, in Worcester county, has been chosen by the Massachusetts Committee on the White House conference on child health and protection to carry out a demonstration of methods by which a community may co-ordinate its forces in an endeavor to measure up to White House conference standards in child welfare. A group of interested persons met recently to discuss the working out of this plan. The Rev. Kenneth MacArthur, secretary for the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, presided at this meeting. A somewhat larger group, designed to represent all of the active organizations in the community, will be called together soon to consider where and how the first steps will be taken.

Church Population Shifting to Country

A recent report of the National Catholic Welfare Association reveals the fact that larger churches may be built in country districts where Catholic families are found in increasing numbers.

In the report is the following:

"One in every three farms in a county in northeastern Ohio, it has been found by U. S. Department of Agriculture study, is occupied by a family that within the past two years had resided and lived in the city.

"Indications point to a recent similar exodus to the country in other parts of the United States, and raise the question of what proportion of these is Catholic and what will be the immediate and future effects upon the distribution and social condition of the Catholic population in the United States.

"This much is certain, the cry of 'back to the land' is no longer the discredited slogan that it was even among many eminent leaders until a year or two ago. The depression has caused not a little stock to be placed in the slogan again."

What's Right With U. S.! by L. B. Walker

How Preach Hope as Ruin Threaten?

One of the prelude questions to be answered by Dr. A. Z. Conrad tomorrow evening from his Park st. pulpit reads: "How can you preach high hope and calm courage to one facing a mortgage foreclosure and an empty cupboard?"

And: Do you recommend summer camps for boys and girls while in their early teens? Should women be accorded equal standing with men in the ministry?

Tomorrow Dr. Conrad's sermon will preach on "Immutable Affinities of Christianity; the Infinite God—passable, believable, lovable."

In the evening "God's Everlasting Yes: It Marches."

The lesson-sermon includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To divest thought of error thrusts aside material evidences in order that the spiritual may be seen and understood; this is the great attainment by means of which we shall sweep away the false and give place to the true. Thus we may establish in truth the temple, or body, 'whose builder and maker is God.'" (p. 428).

Tom, the Bradford's bootblack, who won the "Chevvie" coupe Saturday night from the I. O. O. F. raffle, bought his one ticket 20 minutes before the lucky number was picked from the hat . . . His last book of chances was given to a hellhop who peddled them in hopes the employes at the hotel dieing the last hour! . . . Ruby Newman to Manhattan within a few days for his second Victor recordings, jubilant because they thought enough of the first set to allow him a choice in tunes this time! . . . He's checking over foreign travel literature, too—probably globe-trotting in June . . . Mrs. Florence Butler Meredith, who turned her back on Somerville at Xmas time to costume design for the N. Ytown stage ladies, is jaunting in and out of town about the Corbett girls' creations for their Dance Revue they're staging at the Shubert Theater June 10 . . . The Delivery Boys, now at the Grove are Johnny Tucker (who used to be a N. Y. fireman weighing 220 lbs. . . . And Joe Schuster (who used to be a policeman) weighing 220 . . . In one afternoon a few years ago, Tucker—who was in the firemen's band and Schuster—who was in the coppers' glee club, met in a music publisher's office where they'd gone for orchestrations, decided to form a vaude partnership and wrote their first-of-many-tunes ("Sweetie") together . . . Fast workers . . . From the Grove they're bound for a huddle under a Big Bradio Mogul's wing—so oil up the dials and hide your time for them airing their radio stars' impersonatings . . . O. O. McIntyre is feverishly working to get ahead with his columns these days because Eugene Sullivan found any minute—his annual jogging about over there, you know.

Blades and Belles

When Socialregistyrite Mrs. Malcolm McElwan spent a week-end Sunday-tucking-in on her summer farm, just outside of Springfield, digging into cedar chests, closets, mothballed dresser drawers and what not for genuine old-time duds and fol de rols, she'd no idea that her labors would be so appreciated at the old-time Pop concert on Wednesday . . . Her coterie of blades and belles, the last to arrive at Symphony Hall, won the prize of the event . . . And never will David McKibben, Ronald Findley, South America's daughter Esther Farro, Jacques De Lys and Mrs. Marian L. Higgins ever forget their pride to the Hall in the old buggy behind good old naggy "Susie" (the old stay-out-late you see with her driver afront the Copley on good nights) . . . "Susie" is eight years old, by the way, the pride of her coachie-master's heart—but scarcely a lady for all of that, according to Jacques De Lys! . . . Yesterday Mrs. Higgins sailed for Honduras to visit her son . . .

Speaking Right Up!

Lilla Viles Wyman, dean of Hub dance directors, heard what we said about Mabel Patten's costume at her Dance Festival last Saturday afternoon, eh? . . . We must tell Mrs. Wyman, that her letter of explanation regarding the lovely festival frock—which Mable "blew herself to"—was not the costume we meant . . . The spangles we objected to were on the back-to-nature costume (with silver evening slippers) worn by Miss Patten during her interpretation of "Trees". . . A beautiful effect, an artistic idea, delightfully interpreted by Miss Patten—but decidedly off-color when one discovered the modernish trimmings . . . Even to save time in quick costume changes, we were amazed that Mrs. Wyman, great artiste that she is, would permit such a breach of Terpsichorean detail . . . We want to see that number again some day . . . Sans shoes and circus queen spangles—but—use there's no sense of rubbishing a really lovely theme and idea!

DRAMA DISCUSSED By Nicholas Young ◆ Harleigh Schultz REVIEWS THE STATE

Youth Takes a Hand in the Game

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Without much excitement, perhaps with no regrets, your dear old theater is gradually passing out of the hands of tottering Elder Statesmen into the clutches of the boys who have been mostly observed adorning the ringside. There is a dead certainty that next season will find many youngsters sitting in high places and doing their darndest to keep the drama alive. There have been signs of this for many months—in fact, the operation is pretty well under way.

• • •

You have only to recall that Katharine Cornell took matters into her own hands and became, with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," the most distinguished of our actress-managers. With a modicum of help from Lee Shubert, Ethel Barrymore gave personal attention to producing and discovered compensations far beyond her fondest hopes. Even the playwrights are showing indications of displeasure with the old order of things, as Elmer Rice might tell you if he would. For more than a season Mr. Rice has been writing eloquent plays and producing them with no little personal honor. A new regime is setting up on Broadway. The playwrights, who have tearfully watched a diminishing theater grow leaner and leaner will tell you that Manifest Destiny is raising the writing boys to their true elevation.

• • •

They will tell you that the Elder Statesmen have had their day; that Belasco and Erlanger are gone, that the Shuberts possess magnificent playhouses but small inclination to produce, and except for Florenz Ziegfeld, Earl Carroll and George White, who dabble in fluffy and popular musicals, the oral drama, to survive, must have an infusion of new blood. The playwrights, it appears, are taking this view of it, for it promised that during the next season such authors as Marc Connelly, George Abbott, Philip Barry, Edward Childs Carpenter and Philip Dunning will not only write for the theater but produce for it. Youth will be served.

• • •

With less fanfare, but with grim determination, two Boston lads of inventive qualities, will take over the Plymouth Theater on May 30 for the presentation of Samuel Dockrell's "Phantom Cargo." This, as you may be pardoned for suspecting from its title, is a melodrama of rum running, general smuggling and what not. Its sponsors are Richard Wharf, the handiest man we ever served the Copley Theater in its halcyon days, and Al Duffy, whilom press agent and newspaper columnist. Although briefly mentioned in the authentiated promotion, the author will play an important part in the administration outside of providing a workable manuscript. Mr. Wharf, of course, will direct affairs back of the footlights; Mr. Duffy will supervise the "front of the house" and see that none shall enter who does not pay. On the whole, this is a fair division of responsibility. Each of these young producers is a specialist in his own department. It is only to be hoped that Mr. Dockrell is as well equipped.

As everyone knows, burlesque many months ago reached its lowest ebb and in easy fashion simmered down into atrophy. In spite of this the Old Howard has waved its flag and kept moving forward. The Bandalls, playing Widows' next week the Howards will wind up another prosperous season, a bit unsteady in spots, but still encouraging. Mr. Al Somerby, head man at the Howard, announces that by mid-August there will be a renewal of burlesque at his playhouse.

INFLEXIBLE

YOUTH, HUMOR AND BEAUTY PRANCE GAYLY IN SCREENLAND'S TEMPLES

Charles "Chic Sale and Jackie Cooper in "When a Feller Needs a Friend." (Orpheum).

EXPECTANT

Films Winner Over the Pen

Helen Twelvetrees may be regarded as a newspaper contribution to the screen. While the blonde actress never has pounded a typewriter in a news room or chased a story like so many screen authors and executives of today have done, she belongs to the press by one of the closest of ties. Her father, William Jurgens, is a newspaper man.

Miss Twelvetrees, who plays the feminine lead opposite John Barrymore in "State's Attorney," now at RKO Keith's, at one time contemplated joining the journalistic professions. She studied art with the idea of doing sketches and cartoons. The urge for an acting career overcame this early ambition, however.

Harvard Takes the House

The fourth week of the 47th season of the Pop Concerts in Symphony Hall will open tomorrow with the second Sunday evening program. Monday will be the annual Harvard Night with many features including the presence of Gustav Holst, noted English composer as guest. On next Saturday evening there will be a dance program, ending with an appearance with the orchestra of Hans Wiener and his dancing group. Hans Wiener and Otto Ackermann have given numerous recitals in New York, Boston and elsewhere in recent seasons.

Stage and Film Fare Splendid on the New Orpheum Bill

In one of the most appealing stories ever brought to the screen, young Jackie Cooper and Charles "Chic" Sale outshine any of their previous performances in "When a Feller Needs a Friend," the current screening at Loew's Orpheum.

A boy crippled since birth who fights to overcome his handicap provides a characterization for Jackie that has very strong heart appeal; while Charles "Chic" Sale gives another of his inimitable portrayals of "old men." Together they rise to heights of poignant acting seldom seen on the screen.

The locale of the story is in a mid-Western town at the home of Tom Randall, moderately successful lawyer. The Randalls, played with real sympathy by Ralph Graves and Dorothy Peterson, are united in anxious solicitation over the welfare of their crippled son, Limpy. Their overanxious coddling of the boy is the cause of difficulties that are a foundation for the action of the picture. The supporting players, including Amy Shuford, Helen Parrish, Donald Haines and Oscar Apfel, are outstanding.

Heartliners on this week's vaudeville bill are Douglas Leavitt and Ruth Lockwood, Boston musical comedy favorites, with their company of comedy assistants. This favorite comedy team brings to vaudeville their well-known musical comedy humors and are offering a cycle of satirical "blackouts." The Stanley Twins, dancing darlings, with the Dodge Brothers prove another highlight of the bill in a diversified dance offering. The Delivery Boys, Schuster and Tucker, popular radio stars, are an added attraction to the bill and others appearing include George Beatty, unique comedian, and the Five Elgins, comedy jugglers.

A new Laurel and Hardy comedy, "Any Old Port," is also offered.

Screen Shorts

King Baggott, former director, became a motion picture executive at the RKO Radio studio the other day. Hold on! Baggott merely plays that role in Constance Bennett's starring vehicle, "The Truth About Hollywood," in production.

• • •

Anderson Lawler, Nella Walker, William Tooker and Maude Turner Gordon have been added to the cast of "Is My Face Red?" with Ricardo Cortez and Helen Twelvetrees featured and William Seiter directing.

Gay Paree the Screen Lure

Lovers of French will be in the driver's seat on the Fine Arts, cinematic carriage this week. They will see and hear Henri Garat, called the most charming young lover of modern French comedy, in "Il Est Charmant" (He is charming).

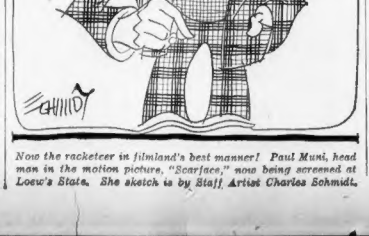
Meg Lemonnier, his feminine partner, reveals remarkable talent. Parisians have seen her on the legitimate stage in "Broadway," "Good News," "Arsene Lupin" and many other plays. "Il Est Charmant" is her latest success. She not only is good to look at but owns an enviable voice and knows how to use it.

The plot concerns the two leads as law devotees. An inheritance enables the masculine representative to employ this delightful creature in a jazzy law office. Scandal goes the rounds and, to save her reputation, he pretends to love another. In the end all the conflict is overcome.

Dramatic Mask Dancer to Appear in Boston

Myra Kinch, dramatic mask dancer who is the new concert sensation of Europe, will appear in Boston next winter on her first American tour under the direction of Fritz Horwitz of Berlin, the impresario who originally discovered and introduced La Argentina and Mary Wigman to the public. At her recent recital in Max Reinhardt's Theater she received one of the greatest ovations ever accorded a dancer in Berlin.

INDUSTRY'S NEW CAPTAIN



Now the racketeer in filmland's best manner! Paul Muni, head man in the motion picture, "Scarface," now being screened at Loew's State. She sketch is by Staff Artist Charles Schmidt.

Carole Lombard takes life easy in "Sinners in the Sun," current at the Metropolitan.

Pops Tonight

Arthur Fiedler will introduce excerpts from "Of Thee I Sing" at the Pop concert in Symphony Hall tonight. The program follows:

"Sinners in the Sun" Diverting Photoplay at Metropolitan

By HARRIS MORGAN

Noblesse oblige! Dropping the word that "Sinners in the Sun," new film at the Metropolitan, is diverting, and that the stage show is very entertaining, we speed up to hand a big bouquet to Fabien Sevitzky, now so long a popular favorite that he is become a local institution—a landmark of Met musical excellence. The point in mind is that this week he does a most unusual thing—he surrenders the limelight completely and most graciously eclipses himself in favor of a featured musician.

Sevitzky, in accustomed perfect manner of this maestro, leads his orchestra through a medley of Viennese airs.

Each week, at each show, he and his band are accorded an ovation. It never fails to be forthcoming, and deservedly. Currently, his number has been woven into a performance by Leona May Smith, Boston lass who has won the title of "world's greatest girl trumpeter." She plays splendidly, and Mr. Sevitzky gives her the full stage and all the applause, deliberately effacing himself. Just a further word of praise for this great conductor. In leading the accompaniment for the cornetist, he softened the orchestra so that she had full sway.

Chester Morris

To these words of our Mr. Sevitzky may now know the usual plaudits of triumph are his, as usual. Through many years we have never run across professional act more laudable than his.

Miss Smith merits all the handicapping she gets. She is a clever player, and her triple tonguing is something to marvel at. "Swiss Movements," the revue, is up to the standard. The Lucky Boys stop the show with their footwork, as agile a troupe as one finds anywhere. Joseph Pope Jones, singer, is another "show stopper."

• • •

"Sinners in the Sun" depends for its audience values, upon lively acting in places, many amusing lines and incidents, its shapely models in dress and undress, and its directorial high spots. There is meat in its story, but the scenarist has ploughed after the red cow so that the theme of love and unfaithfulness is a crisscross of frailties. Yet zestful effort by some of the cast and by the director lift it to the point of being generally diverting.

EXPRESSIVE

Ann Corio the Bright Star

To the Old Howard on Monday comes one of the most popular girls in burlesque, Ann Corio, Miss Corio has long been hailed as the "most beautiful girl in burlesque."

The show is the "Blushing Widows" company. With this organization will be Al Anger, a newcomer to Boston; Clyde Bates, clever comic; Jack Hunt, associate comedian; Chickie Wells, Kitty Ellis, Connie Fanslau and Elinor Walent.

A vaudeville feature will be Pearl Diamond Trio, roller skaters. Bill Cunningham presents "Inside Baseball." The talkies are "The Final Edition," with Pat O'Brien and Mae Clark, and "Behind the Mask," with Jack Holt, Constance Cummings and Boris Karloff.

Ann Corio's midnight show comes on Friday at 11:30 p. m.

Truth Bites If Realism Tells It

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Scarface," at Loew's State, is tensely gripping motion picture. It is cinema that smacks one full in the face. It packs that kind of a wallop. The film thumbs its nose at folk who don't like to face the facts of certain angles of life, and starkly races through its grim story in sheer tones of power. Often satirist, it is more frequently thrusting the bare truth at us, in so compelling a manner that "Scarface" is its own unanswerable argument against racketeering and the gangster.

• • •

To see is to be convinced. In rushing lights and shadows it builds up its own defense against its critics. In it the wages of sin is death. It attaches no heroics to the underworld chiefs. It paints them as they are, relentlessly cruel. It steps them up—or is it down?—through the career of greed and crime, and the finish for them all is the same—doom.

It does all this in no uncertain fashion; its course is straight-forward obvious may be the ways of the criminals. The action is incessant, driving, cumulative. It is sometimes as staccato as the much heard machine gun fire. There is an interweaving of sentiment; not too much, just enough, and finely wrought. The killing of a supposed betrayer of a sister; then the death of the sister herself. The rest is ruthless, relentless warfare of gang upon gang, and of law and order upon gangland.

• • •

Most of the characters are hard, cruel. Why not? That's the life! Gangland is unleashed, realism hits you at every turn. Slayings there are galore, but all copied after true life events that you have read about again and again. Gory things do happen, but then they have actually happened in the same way. People have protested this picture on the ground that it would tend to harm youth and public morals. Not so. Seeing "Scarface" is the best tonic one could suggest for civic welfare; it diagnoses the disease, and suggests the remedy.

• • •

The talent Howard Hughes hired did their jobs well. Howard Hawks has directed what is undoubtedly the most real and thrilling of all the gangster movies. Paul Muni is a great actor. His characterization is the best in any picture of the type; and that is some praise. He has able aides. George Raft is outstanding; others are Osgood Perkins, Boris Karloff, C. Henry Gordon, Vince Barnett, Karen Morley and Ann Dvorak.

"Scarface" is not just another gangster picture. On its own merits, it can come belatedly, or later. It is worth seeing.

• • •

Its thrills are not all dramatic. It stirs something of the American within you, gets you on edge, touches a cup of gall to the lips that those things can be true, as true they all are!

"Scarface" is the most eloquent sermon we've ever seen and heard on a problem of such vital concern.

Jobless Turn Out the Fun

Something brand new in the entertainment line will be offered to the patrons of the Bowdoin Square theater, beginning tomorrow, when a group of 12 unemployed men, gathered up and trained by the staff of the house will be presented in a minstrel show.

The unusual talent found after some searching was whipped into shape, and made into an act called "The Big Top Minstrel Show." The versatility of the dozen men surprised even the theater management. Comedy of the rapid-fire sort, singing of quality, instrumentalists and a dozen other "hoofers," are among the assorted bits of entertainment which will be presented.

The whole sketch was routined to conform with stage requirements, and the finished product was excellent.

'It' Girls Billed for Scollay

Leo Henning and his Personality Girls will headline the vaudeville bill at the Publix Scollay theater, Monday. The act is a singing and dancing revue with plenty of talent. The balance of the show will be largely comedy, singing and novelties.

Anthony and Rogers, the "retired banana merchants," are expected to provide their usual side-splitting comedy, while the Wan Wan San Troupe of tumbling acrobats will provide feats from the Orient. The Three Clark Sisters are versatile in that they are able to sing, dance and play the saxaphone. Hayes, Haig and Hows offer the "Follies of Vaudeville." Two other Publix acts will complete the bill.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

—And Cabbages and Kings!

I've always had a sneaking fondness for the famous Carolian doggerel—"The time has come," the walrus said, "to speak of many things—of shoes and ships and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings." It's been my favorite because it was so much easier to memorize than the Thanatopsis, but that's neither here nor there. What I'm getting at is that another one of those days has arrived—where I feel like rambling around and talking things over generally. For instance, I'm just in the mood to want to talk about a few Manhattan folk whose names occasionally appear in columns but who aren't what you might call national figures. Vicki Cummings, for instance. A little blonde gal with all the slimness of an erring wife's excuses and the warmth of a Minsky strip number, which is a crude way to analyze Vicki, but I like to be crude in her case, because she suggests the epitome of refinement without reaching for a lorgnette. Vicki is inordinately ambitious but she's so much prettier than Caesar was that under no circumstances can I imagine you as wanting to say her except with kindness. She wants to star in a musical comedy.

The other day they sent her around to see Lew Gensler and the girl in the office said he'd be tied up for a few minutes. So she sat down and chatted amiably with a tall, good-looking chap. The minutes flew by but he insisted upon talking to her for many hours. Then would you believe it?—it was Lew Gensler, all the time. Perhaps, she'll get the job, I don't know.

I'd like to ramble on, too, bout this good-looking kid you so around in the better nightclubs and speaks—usually in his great formal bib and tucker. Bobby La Tranche is his name and he's in the Social Register. I like the pretty little girls he's usually with—an old stodgy fellow like myself would—but you know what amuses me? The kid actually stands in awe of columnists. He'd like to be one himself—and for a place on a newspaper with a by-line, I think he'd toss his social background and future greycoat. Funny boy! Incidentally, the very tut-tut Miss Elisabeth Marbury, who certainly is no part of Broadway these days, has often said she'd like to write a Broadway column because she knows more about what's going on in the inside — the truth, I mean—than any five of us put together. And while I'm rambling around on this subject, take that Heywood Broun, the managing editor of the Nation, and author of that book-review column—"Hot News." Whenever I get a letter from him he always is "The Maker and Breaker of Columnists," and I don't know as I am blamo him. He was responsible for introducing the first so-called Broadway columnist and it was he who took me out of my job as managing editor of a syndicate that never succeed. First Broadway columnist. Another of the chaps whom he brought to his first tabloid paper as a wireless columnist is now a Broadway commentator and only the other week, he showed still another lad into the columnistic spotlight.

I get a chuckle, too, out of the lady in Des Moines, Ia., who begged me to send an autographed photo of myself. I sent it and it came back to me the other day with a letter from her, in which she explained she was pretty much cut up in her disappointment about my features—she had imagined I looked quite differently. My handwriting was a jolt, too, and she analyzed it for me. It appears my scrawl gave every indication of a person designed to failure and frustration and rage, because of the curtness of my "I's," revealed criminal tendencies. In other words, she was convinced I must be two other fellows, but she softened the blow by enclosing a picture of herself with her own neat autograph. You take this fellow, Mae Ducore. He's a Broadway druggist—one of the few, unless I'm mistaken, who doesn't sell rare editions of semi-pornographic classics and automobile parts. Everybody on Broadway knows Mae—and Mae knows everybody, and it's a rare occasion when you don't run into him around Broadway. I'll be quite honest with you—I always liked the fellow for his amiability, but never took him quite seriously until I visited his home one day and discovered how devoted he is to his mother. I lean towards fellows who go sentimental over their mothers.

I listened the other night to Frances Maddux sing a couple of new songs at the El Garron. I picked up my ears in amazement when I heard the lyrics of one of them and then I settled back and trembled all over with the giggles. It's a bold, bad, highly amusing ditty this gal sings for the cafe trade—and for what makes it particularly effective is she's such a dainty, that as she's belting out in her small town, a "high-toned" lady. You wouldn't think she'd say "damn" loud and certainly not those stronger words but she does and she do—with a sugar of refinement that makes off all suggestion of vulgarity and leaves a spicy, palatable syrup. And when you hear the fellow Arthur Lippmann who writes those funny little ditties that are becoming the rage, there was a chap with lofty ambitions. He used to turn out such neat little poems for the class magazines and sometimes got as much as $1 a line for them—and more often didn't get that much and then someone suggested that he ought to write lyrics for songs. He hated it at first—but did—and now he's making money hand over fist and is he amazed! Fabulously since the verse doesn't have to be so polished and sometimes doesn't even have to make sense if the rhyme is tricky and contagious.

Another thing. The dramatic critics of the town. Reading their vitrolic spasms after a poor play, don't you picture them as portly, tough hombres with tongues shaped like stilettos and fingers dripping carbolic? And yet, they're nice, mild chaps—almost timid some of them. You should get a load of the meekness of Brooks Atkinson, for instance—and the shyness of the tall John Anderson. Percy Hammond, with his hat on, looks like a big, fat overgrown boy with rosy cheeks and John Mason Brown like a kid out of college who'd still like to run the crew. Gilbert Gabriel looks like almost anybody's older brother. You know how one brother's look—sort of reproving like but with their veins overflowing with the milk of human kindness. It's a way older brothers have of looking at if in compensation for being the first born. As for Kelcey Allen—I sometimes wonder why Minsky doesn't hire him for the comic relief.

PARAMOUNT PLANS TO STAR "SCARFACE" ACTOR

George Raft Vehicle to Mark the Return Also of Nancy Carroll

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service, Inc.

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, May 21—Did you, by any chance, see George Raft in "Scarface," a slim, olive-skinned lad with something of Rudolph Valentino about him? In that one picture he received such laudatory notices that Paramount decided on a build-up program for him. They have purchased "Number 55" from Universal. That is the Louis Bromfield story which Junior Laemmle bought from the galley proofs a few months ago.

Just as interesting as the fact that it will feature Raft is the news that it marks Nancy Carroll's return to Paramount. Nancy and Paramount haven't been doing so well. She has been out here waiting production orders and this is her first assignment.

Alison Skipworth is also in the picture. That reminds me that B. P. Schulberg has gone to New York. Wonder if Sam Katz will make any changes in Mr. Schulberg's absence.

Bill Boyd to Make Four

What a row of Bill Boyd (screen actor) has had these past few months. He and Dorothy Sebastian have been cruising in Mexican waters and resting at the beach, waiting for the right picture to come along. Bill hasn't really done anything since he and Pathe parted company. He was formerly one of their big male shots you will remember. He is shortly to return to work and make a series of four outdoor pictures with an industrial background, for Larry Darmour. Radio will release them and the first will be "Ironbound" by Graham Richards and it will be made at the old Pathe studio where Bill was formerly one of the chief actors.

Gilda Shimmies Back

The shimmying lady, Gilda Gray, is back among us. Gilda, who has made several attempts at pictures and has never proved she can act as well as shake a mean shimmy, has been signed by Benjy Ziedman to play the lead in "Minnie, the Moocher." Same title as the song you have probably heard on the radio. After Gilda makes her picture she will go to Hollywood to play the lead in "Minnie, the Moocher," Same title as the song you have probably heard on the radio. After Gilda makes her picture she will go Gilda Gray into Loew's State Theater for a personal appearance to let the latest conception of the dance she made famous. Gilda has been off stage and screen a long time, having just recovered from a serious illness. "Minnie, the Moocher" will be an independent release.

What a Title!

Will someone hold my hand, please? This is more than I can bear. "Madame Bovary," Flaubert's well known novel, is to be called "Indecent." How could you, M. H. Hoffman? This is almost the worst change of title I have ever heard. Why film a book as well known as "Madame Bovary" if the name is to be changed and to such a name? Lila Lee will have the feminine lead. Lila looks great these days and even if she isn't engaged to George Hill she is seen everywhere with him. H. B. Warner, Beryl Mercer, Joyce Compton and that expert hand-kisser, Ivan Lebedeff, are in the cast. Jason Robards also has a part. Al Ray directs.

Chatter in Hollywood

The debutantes and what have you that Howard Hughes brought on his yacht from New York, chaperoned of course, had a beach attracting much attention in Hollywood. One girl in particular is unusually beautiful. Her name is Marion Marston and she has been escorted places by Randolph Scott, who seemed mighty attentive to her at the Airport Club Gardens the opening night. Some one tells me that Miss Marston will remain in Hollywood if she gets a picture engagement. That "if" is a mighty big word, so I can't be saying whether you will see her on the screen or not.

A Line or Two

The Ward Morehouses whose hospitable home in Santa Monica was the scene of so many impromptu Sunday gatherings, have gone to New York. They are leaving for Europe immediately on a delayed honeymoon. But they are coming back. A contract signed by Mr. Morehouse with Universal assures us of that. Ward has agreed to write an original story for Lew Ayers. A friend of the Morehouses, Leah Salisbury, New York press agent, is due here today. Eddie Sutherland didn't wait long after he returned from Tahiti with Dougias Fairbanks to get himself a job. He has been signed to direct "Little Accident" for Radio. Tia to have Mitzi Green as Orphan Annie.

Broadcast Humor

"Yeah—when they get television, maybe I can stay home and broadcast my face to the studio instead of having to come and work on the set," he remarked.

"Yeah?" retorted Harry Beaumont, his director. "Then we'd have to have a radio at the studio and broadcast 20 alarm clocks in order to get you out of bed, I suppose."

Wynne Gibson Superb as Star in Mother Love Picture

"The Strange Case of Clara Deane" is a photoplay that drips sentiment of the kind the women particularly love to see on screen. Featured on the Paramount and Uptown screens, the picture brings out the "hankies" at times—a sort of Chatauqua salute by the audience to the trials of the heroine, Wynne Gibson. This actress, hitherto assigned lesser roles, now shines as a star, and a sterling job she does.

* * *

The story takes the harassed central figure through years of suffering and sacrifice. At the start Miss Gibson's wedding to Pat O'Brien is interrupted by police. She goes through with the ceremony, only to learn Pat is a thief. She will make good for him by repaying the money, but the husband goes wrong again, and the evidence seems to link the wife up with his new crime.

Pat O'Brien

They have a little daughter, who is adopted by Dudley Digges, sleuth in the case. Mother and father are taken to prison.

Mother is freed first, but is prevented with union with her child by Digges. The girl is to wed a rich young man. Now out of jail, the no-good husband learns the secret and intends to freeze the bridegroom-to-be. But Miss Gibson aims her revolver well. The kind Digges takes the blame and the film resumes her lonely life.

Next to the star, both Digges and Lee Kohlmar, as the proprietor of a shop where Miss Gibson finds employment, are splendid. Minor parts are satisfactorily filled.

Vaudeville

When Leo Carillo finds a few spare weeks on his hands, he offers them to vaudeville. The only regret RKO has is that they are not more in number, because Carillo's popularity was great before he became a star of the stage and screen, and is naturally greater now. Nobody gets more fun out of a dialect story than Leo and the public knows it.

* * *

Ward Wilson is stepping away from the microphone long enough to give his imitations of celebrities in vaudeville. Wilson is one of W3Zx Royal Vagabonds. He impersonates more than a thousand different important people and part of his act will be a request program.

* * *

When Earl Carroll's Vanities called it a season, William Demarest took his sense of humor into Vode'l and is now kicking up a lot of fun. Demarest, like most of the feature musical comedy players, is a vaudeville product.

Stage Lass Is the Leader

This week's stage program at the RKO-Boston, which is the last vaudeville bill to be presented at that house before the inauguration of the new policy which will bring to that theater lavish stage presentations, will be topped by Violet Carlson. She returns to RKO vaudeville, the medium which first launched her on the road to fame. She presents a colorful amusing and artistic series of her hits, songs and dances from the musicals which have featured and starred her.

Eddie Garr, of the Gus Edwards' hunting grounds, impersonates Jane Janis and he doesn't overlook Cissy Loftus, another ace mimic. The dancers and pantomimers of the show get a chance to see themselves as others see them and his impression of Jimmy Durante is said to be a hit.

Other major RKO acts include the team of Marion Bellit and Gil Lamb, who offer a farce called "At Joe's Place," in which they are assisted by Reri Keyes.

MRS. POOLE FOR $5,000,000,000 LOAN PLAN

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, unopposed candidate for the presidency of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, today endorsed the William Randolph Hearst $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan proposal.

"If we put across the Liberty and Victory loans to finance the World War," she said, "and to lend European powers money to carry on their wars, it ought to be possible for us to do an equal piece of work to underwrite the return to prosperity.

"I understand the present administration is rather sympathetic to the issuance of a Federal prosperity loan, and while our President hasn't in mind a loan quite that much, the big minds of the country support that idea.

"Certainly if we stood 100 per cent in war we should do so in peace. A $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan issue, it seems to me, would tend to restore confidence, and confidence is the basis of the whole thing to a certain extent.

"Women should help in the raising of the money as they did in raising the Victory loans during the war.

"Return to active participation in national affairs by the people, coupled with a prosperity loan, would serve as a rehabilitation measure in bringing relief for the social and economic ills which today invokes the country."

ELY ORDERS TAX FIGHT PUSHED

Gov. Ely today instructed his House lieutenants to renew the fight for that part of his program relating to a tax on cigars, cigarettes and tobacco.

Rep. Francis E. Rafter of Salem, in charge of that particular phase of the bill, will renew reconsideration Monday of the vote whereby the tobacco tax was rejected by a vote of 101 to 106. The governor is optimistic that enough votes can be marshalled to reverse the House's decision. The tax, it is estimated, will bring in in the neighborhood of $4,000,000.

Once the bill is approved, it will undoubtedly be sent to the committee on ways and means with the expectation that additional changes in the tax law can be made to raise additional revenue for the cities and towns for welfare relief.

3 BOYS AND DOG HURT IN CRASH

Three boys and a dog were injured in Wellesley today when the car in which they were riding was struck by another. The boys and dog were taken to Newton hospital for treatment of minor injuries, but the dog vanished somewhere between the ambulance and the hospital portals.

They were cut and bruised. Their car collided with another driven by Sarah Pannatopl of 46 Pilgrim rd., Quincy, who was unhurt.

WOMEN'S CLUBS PICK LEADERS, END MEETING

Inertia and the failure of American people to right things that are going wrong are the country's chief ailments, according to Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, guest speaker at the concluding session of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs at New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Mrs. Poole, unopposed candidate for the presidency of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, said that when she took office she would plead with American womanhood to inoculate the dormant civilization of ours to realization that citizenship means more than simply casting the ballot.

Mrs. Frank P. Bennett of Clifton-dale was elected today as president of the Massachusetts Federation.

Other officers chosen are Mrs. Thomas J. Walker, Whitinsville Women's Club, first vice-president; Mrs. John H. Kimball, Danvers Women's Association, second vice-president; Mrs. Herman I. Harding, Chatham Women's Club, third vice-president; Mrs. Henry W. Hildreth, Franklin Club, Winchester, fourth vice-president; Mrs. Edward M. Cox, Milton Women's Club, recording secretary; Mrs. David A. Wescott, Dorchester Women's Club, recording secretary; Mrs. Frank M. Anderson, West Newbury Women's Club, clerk, and Mrs. Frederick S. Davies, Pembroke Club of Boston, treasurer.

About 2000 attended the annual meeting, which concluded today.

KREUGER DIED OWING MILLIONS

Stockholm, May 20 (AP)—Ivar Kreuger, the world-famous "match king" who shot and killed himself in Paris March 12, died virtually penniless and owing $168,300,000, it was revealed today.

The announcement was made by the Swedish committee which has been investigating Kreuger's affairs since his suicide.

The $168,300,000 is in personal debts and indirect liability against the match king's name, the committee said. There will be little, if anything, left for distribution to unsecured creditors.

The committee found that fictitious assets were set up on the Kreuger & Toll books since 1925, and that the state of the books was such that it was difficult to produce a definite balance sheet.

Too much should not be expected of the new bond pool, which is formed to accumulate issues at attractive yields and will not reach for lions on price bulges . . . Its true significance lies in another direction . . . It means the banks are feeling the effects of extreme easy money and are seeking outlets for their surplus funds . . . Business loans are next. H. E. B.

HOPE FADES FOR 3 ON YACHT

Fall River, May 21 (AP)—The last remaining hope that three young men, missing after a 15-foot sail boat capsized yesterday might have been saved, vanished today.

Police were convinced Matthew Makuch, 21; his brother Albert, 17, and Matthew Nedbia, also 17, all were dead after they had checked and interviewed all boats that might possibly have picked up any of the three.

Joseph Nedbia, member of the party, John Niedbia, twin brother of Matthew, was picked up after a two-mile swim by the brigantine Sparkle Island. He left the other three clinging to the boat, while he tried to swim ashore. When the rescue boat was found, there was no trace of the three.

HOOVER BEATEN IN OREGON

Portland, Ore., May 21 (AP)—Joseph Francis Burke, Portland publician, and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Democrat, held approximately equal strength in the Oregon presidential preference primary.

On returns from 537 of 1783 precincts in yesterday's balloting, France led President Hoover 10,423 to 5563. France's name was the only one appearing on the Republican ballot and those who voted for the President wrote in his name.

From 477 precincts, the New York governor received 7240 votes to 2086 for Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma. Murray was Roosevelt's only listed opponent. The name of Alfred E. Smith, party candidate in 1928, was written in only 103 times.

The successful candidates will control Oregon's delegates at the national conventions until they release them or all hope of victory is abandoned. The state has 12 Republican and 10 Democratic votes.

Nicaragua Capital Shaken by Quake

Managua, Nicaragua, May 21 (AP)—An earthquake of about three seconds' duration shook the city at 8:10 a. m. C. S. T. today. Frightened residents, but causing no damage.

Rayon Plant to Close

Roanoke Va., May 21 (AP)—The Roanoke plant of the Viscose Corporation, which employs 4000 rayon workers, announced today that it would suspend operations June 3 and reopen July 5 if conditions warrant.

Financial News and Comment

STATE ST. Hears:

That the gradual tapering off of the decline is evidence that the market recognizes the approach of the percentage limit at which selling enthusiasm should be pretty well burnt out. The rate of decline is well ahead of previous time limits and it seems prices are destined to mark time, or drift somewhat lower, until the time factor is more nearly in line with that of previous selling phases.

Buying Calls

Advices which come to this column, from important brokerage circles tell of good buying in the call market.. These buying options, good for 30 days, cover a period in which it is expected definitely constructive news will develop. Before they expire Congress should have balanced the budget and taken some step to provide nourishment for sick industry.

Aside from the fact that Congress will probably wake up there is the answer as it must take at least a temporary vacation during convention time. This will provide the market with some relief and allow for bullish activities. Finally the Reserve credit easing campaign is expected to exert bullish influence on commodity prices by the end of June.

Boardroom Briefs

The Quinan brothers, Joseph and Frank, are together again. This time with Clark Childs at their main office in Postoffice sq. . . . Whitney & Elwell are distributing a circular which is of great interest to all those who devote any serious thought to the gold standard and the chance it will be abandoned by the United States, which it will not.

The continued taking of gold for foreign account has its laughable side when one realizes how much is forced on it. This money is non held up by a moratorium because Europe is too poor to pay . . . In order to get the stabilization more equable we should declare a moratorium on gold shipments until debt payments are resumed.

Odds and Ends

Many observers feel the continued earmarking and shipment of gold is a balm on the reconstruction campaign . . . The obtaining of the $275,000,000 loan by Pennsylvania probably means the common dividend will be dropped . . . The recent, and prospective, loans by Consolidated Gas mean smaller common earnings and the stock is being liquidated.

Bond Purchases on Sharp Reactions

In recent periods of weakness in the bond market, sharp dips have hit purchase orders put in a long time ago when prices were much higher. Recently, the chief financial executive of one of the important railroads was notified that he had bought some bonds at around 25 or 15 points below the prices he had been willing when he put in his order for a small number. Discussing the purchase he said:

"I remember once discussing trading with Addison Cammack. Cammack was a great hand for buying bonds in an either side a long time in advance. We were talking about it and Cammack said, 'I've always noticed that if you think its going to rain in the morning, it's always a good idea to put your pails out to catch it.

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

EVENING up for the week-end brought a firmer tone to the stock market today after an irregular decline in the first hour. Closing gains were of small proportions, however, while many stocks showed losses. There was a new quota of weak spots, including Montgomery Ward, B. M. T., Loew's and Loose-Wiles. Loew's strength reflected a rally going to a new low.

Utilities were heavy. Oils strengthened after an early decline. Motor stocks were soft. Bonds were heavy, while commodities were easy.

Westinghouse Firm Recently

Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing has been firmness in recent market sessions. Announcement of the approval of a loan to the Pennsylvania Railroad by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation stimulated speculative interest in Westinghouse.

The Pennsylvania, in making its application for a loan, estimated that expenditures on its Washington-New York electrification project this year would total $47,000,000 and that the additional amount necessary to complete its program was roughly $97,000,000. Westinghouse undoubtedly will benefit from orders for equipment involved in pushing the electrification plan.

SPECTATOR Says:

Wall Street was surprised and interested in the Young coalition plan to turn the business tide, but the action of the market indicates that it is still in a wailing mood. One fact is that Washington so far has contributed nothing to cheer about and the Senate is still battling away on taxes and balancing the budget. While this situation remains there is little reason for doing things.

Action Puzzles

The market in the last two weeks is very apt to go down as the great Sinnes puzzle of 1932. Some well-posted people have been looking for a real rally.

And about all they have received so far is eye strain.

Yet the fact remains that the decline is growing the short side should be avoided . . . That is, in a general sense. Even the weekend bull of the last week or so would not be averse in taking profits on the short side if he knew of a situation that was turning to be sour . . . .

Here and There

Selling in Commercial Solvents followed reports the company was curtailing operations and had shut down some of its plants . . . Looks as though someone were badly hurt in Loew's. Reports are that most of the selling has been coming from out of town . . .

No other explanation for the weakness in the amusement stocks is needed, however, than the bond market, where their senior obligations have been dropping steadily.

Dividends

Boston & Albany Railroad declared usual quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share due at this time, payable June 30 to stock of record May 31.

* * *

Safeway Stores, Inc., declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.25 on common, $1.75 on 7 per cent preferred and $1.50 on 6 per cent preferred, payable July 1 to stock of record June 17.

* * *

U. S. Dairy Products Corp. declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the class A stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 10. Previously $1.50 was paid quarterly.

STOCK PRICES ARE MIXED IN BOSTON

Leading shares were mostly mixed in today's dull dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Changes were limited largely to fractions. New England Telephone was strong, advancing a point and closing the short session at 86.

Fractional gains were recorded for Loew's Theaters and United Shoe. Pennsylvania was slightly higher, while No wHaven was down a minor fraction at the close. Atchison and Pennsylvania was slightly higher, while No wHaven was down a minor fraction at the close. Atchison and Pennsylvania was slightly part of the session.

Eastern Gas & Fuel prior preferred slipped off 2 points and closed at 54. American Telephone, after selling down a point, rallied, to close unchanged.

Montreal Trading Curb Is Lifted

Employment Is Up by Detroit Index

Detroit, May 21—The local employment index of industrial department, compiled by the Detroit Board of Commerce May 16 was 69, against 63.6 April 15.

Scott Paper Pays

Scott Paper Co. declared regular quarterly cash dividend of 85 cents on common, payable June 30 to stock of record June 15. Directors decided to discontinue paying stock dividends on common on a semi-annual basis.

CLOSE STEADY IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

A sag in the first hour carried a number of leaders off a point or so, but the list hardened in the last hour, and losses were largely regained. The turnover was only about 300,000 shares.

SOME ISSUES HIGHER

News developments of a character to influence the market were meagre, but financial quarters remained hopeful over the formation of the board of industrialists and bankers to aid in credit expansion.

While nothing in the way of direct comment from members of the group was available, Wall Street was busy with gossip over the prospect of a concerted move to stabilize the bond market.

Among a number of issues finishing fractionally higher were U. S. Steel, Eastman, National Biscuit, North American and United Pacific. American Can recovered a fractional loss and American Telephone closed unchanged after selling a point. There was a fair volume of selling in Standard of N. J. for a time, and it closed a fraction lower.

Tobacco again ran into some selling. Liggett & Myers was an isolated soft spot, losing about 4 points, while the Class "B" issue, American Tobacco "B" lost a major fraction, but Reynolds was steady. Selling may have been in response to publication of the April production figures, but the loss shown was in keeping with estimates.

LOEWS CLOSES UP

More selling appeared in some of the amusements, but Loews common closed a fraction higher, after dipping to a new bottom. Loews preferred dropped 3 then rebounded 6 from the bottom. Loews-Wiles was a soft spot, finishing low.

Week-end surveys of the steel industry indicated a further slight gain in output. Youngstown operations are estimated at 26 per cent of capacity for next week, a fractional advance over this week.

Foreign exchanges were marked by a slump in the Dutch Florin, which got down to a level at which further gold losses to Amsterdam seemed improbable for the time being a threat. This currency broke 6 points to 40.52 for cables. Belgian and French and Belgian francs, however, remained firm. Sterling was steady.

In commodities, cotton moved narrowly.

Growth of Savings Deposits Is Noted

President Wilson G. Wing of the Providence (R. I.) Institute for Savings, who has just been elected president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, in closed an already growth of savings deposits during past three years "seemingly defies the United States during depression, is moving toward ideal distribution of wealth discussed in economics. He asserted no other country has ever had half its bank deposits in this form of savings. Deposits in savings banks of country own about 35 per cent of nation's total savings and their deposits approximate $1,233,000,000 more than at this time three years ago, said Mr. Wing.

Niagara Shares Is Making Exchange

Stockholders of Niagara Shares Corp. of Maryland having approved reduction in stock, the company announces the plan of exchange has become effective. Old preferred is exchangeable or Class A preferred on a share-for-share basis and the old common Class B common on basis of five old shares for one B common share.

Women's Club Show

With the Candid Camera

By CANDID CAMERA

The Women's City Club of Boston was my destination as the cameraman toddled along with me in hand. They were holding their annual flower show, and were reproducing a Mexican market scene as the center of interest.

Miss Louise M. Brandon, ex-secretary of the club, is just wondering how that Mexican scarf would look around her neck. The scarf, together with many other Mexican articles, were on display.

Mrs. Delano Wight, chairman of the Flower Show, held at 40 Beacon st., on the club grounds, seems to like that piece of Mexican pottery pretty well.

'JAFSIE' HITS AT HOT CLIP TOWARD NEW BEDFORD

STOPS TO EAT IN DANBURY (CT.) ROADHOUSE

Trailed by Detectives Who Admit That They Don't Know Where They Are Going

Danbury, Ct., May 21 (AP)—Dr. John F. Condon, "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case, arrived at a roadhouse on the outskirts of Danbury shortly before noon today, after driving up here at high speed from New York.

Two New York detectives, trailing him in another car, said they did not know where he and they were going.

"We haven't the slightest idea," one of them said.

Condon announced he was going to have lunch in the roadhouse.

He met some acquaintances in the cafe and, pointing to the reporters and the detectives with a smile, said:

Two New Jersey State policemen called at his home in the Bronx before he left. It had been announced he would examine rogues' gallery pictures in Newark today.

After talking with him a few minutes they went away, returned, had another brief conference and left again. Then Dr. Condon started out.

Shortly after his arrival in Danbury he said his next stop would be Pawtucket, R. I., and that he also wanted to go to New Bedford, Mass.

"I have received a communication," he said, "and expect to receive other communications along the way."

Connecticut state police in Hartford learned this afternoon Dr. Condon was en route to Providence by way of Hartford and Willimantic, on some mission connected with efforts to solve the Lindbergh mystery.

Lindy Probers Hunt Clues in Curtis' Hoax Story

New York, May 21 (INS)—Devious ramifications of the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder investigation today overshadowed the hunt for the criminals, which appeared to have reached an impasse.

Through the circuitous moves of investigating the amazing confession of John H. Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boat builder, that his supposed negotiations with kidnapers were phantasies invented by himself, authorities hoped to provide means with which to pierce the mystery.

New Jersey authorities still were anxious to have Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, Curtis' associate in the negotiations, confront the boat builder, but Atty.-Gen. Stevens was uncertain how this could be accomplished, since the dean refused to make the trip even when officials offered to pay its expenses.

Dr. John F. Condon, "Jafsie," who tossed $50,000 in bills to the purported leader of the abductors of the baby, was to be escorted by detectives on a round of New Jersey and the Philadelphia rogues' galleries.

After he testified yesterday before the Bronx County grand jury investigating the $50,000 ransom payment, Condon went to New Rochelle, N. Y., where he had a tiff with Public Safety Director Curley.

PRAISES "JAFSIE"

Curley told Condon he would help provided the aged university lecturer gave a description of the man he wanted to identify in the rogues' gallery. He asked whether it was a member of "Dutch" Schultz's gang.

"Who are you, anyway?" Condon suddenly asked excitedly.

"Never you mind who I am. You'll find out soon enough," Curley answered.

Condon then took a look through the photographs of criminals apparently without success.

"My visit has no significance; it was merely a social call," he told interviewers.

"He is a wonderful man and it's too bad half the people in the world aren't like him, with the same measure of integrity and high resolve. It would mean less corruption and crime."

This was generally accepted as reflecting Col. Lindbergh's own faith in Condon, the only one of the many intermediaries he appointed who remains active in the hunt for his son's abductors.

Wellesley Students in Tableau Tribute to Thomas A. Edison

As a feature of exercises on the Wellesley College campus today the above tableau "Light," is being presented by more than two score students, shown in dress rehearsal. This is tree day at the college and they always plan an elaborate program for the occasion. The tableau deals with the discovery of the electric light by Thomas A. Edison. NEW GANGSTER IN KIDNAPING

Baltimore, May 21 (AP)—A man long identified with New Jersey liquor running activities was disclosed today as the "mysterious gangster in Maryland" sought for questioning in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

The man who remained unnamed, informed Arthur Mills, identification expert of the Maryland House of Correction that the body of the kidnaped child would be found within five miles of the Lindbergh estate two days before it actually was discovered.

TOLD SCHWARZKOPF

Mills, formerly a member of the Maryland state police, said the rum-runner further informed him that the baby had been killed by blows on the head, and that the body had been hidden near the flier's home.

"I didn't pay any attention to it at the time," Mills said, "but later when I read that the body had been found, I communcated my information to Col. Schwarzkopf of the New Jersey police. Two officers came here yesterday to investigate it."

Mills said he had first known the man at Ocean City, Md., in December, 1929, when more than a score of men were arrested while attempting to land a cargo of liquor on the beach.

3 OR 4 INVOLVED

He said he saw the rum-runner two days before the body of the Lindbergh baby was found, and that he complained of the police activity which hampered his liquor activities.

"If somebody doesn't do something about the case soon, I will," Mills quoted the man as having said.

He also told him he knew several people connected with the case and that three or four persons were involved, Mills said.

Mills declined to give the name of the man, but said he had sent it to the New Jersey police officials investigating the kidnaping.

Sorrow Halts Lindy Park Dedication

Little Falls, Minn., May 21 (AP)—There was no Lindbergh celebration in Little Falls today.

The day—fifth anniversary of the flier's Paris flight—had been set aside for dedication of Lindbergh State Park in honor of Col. Lindbergh, a native Minnesotan. But elaborate ceremonies were called off because of the tragic murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Col. Lindbergh, several months ago, had written that he would consider an invitation to come here. The park was created by the last Legislature and is on the site of the old Lindbergh homestead.

COUNSEL SEEKS TO FREE CURTIS

Norfolk, Va., May 21 (INS)—Several inquiries into the phantom Lindbergh kidnap negotiations of John Hughes Curtis were concluded today as a move to determine how haz may be done in the way of defending the shipbuilder.

W. C. Pender, a member of one of the most prominent law firms here, was on the way north to see what he could do for the negotiator held in a New Jersey jail.

He was employed by Curtis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Curtis, and wa due in Flemington during the afternoon.

Probes to determine whether any grounds existed for prosecution of Curtis by the state or city were abandoned as unproductive, although there are still a few matters to be checked before they will be formally ended.

Both Charles B. Boland, director of public safety, and John M. Arnold, commonwealth attorney, announced they found nothing on which prosecution of Curtis could be based.

NEW CRUISER LAUNCHED

Under heavy guard because of recent vandalism, the new 10,000-ton navy cruiser Portland slid down the ways at Fore River today, her bow splashed with mineral water.

More than 5000 persons, all admitted on special passes, witnessed the launching within the yard and 10,000 more lined the shores of Weymouth river.

Mary Elizabeth Brooks, 12, daughter of Ralph D. Brooks, Portland, Me., city council president, wielded the bottle of mineral water that christened the cruiser for her home city.

The cruiser is one of 15 authorized by Congress in 1929 and one of seven under construction in various parts of the country. She is equal to the cruiser Northampton in all measurements by the length. That is 610.3 over all, 10 feet longer than the Northampton.

Distinguished guests of the city and the military were present for the launching. They included Rear Admiral Laning, president of the naval war college, Newport, R. I., Commissioner F. S. Sandberg of the United States Shipping Board; Capt. H. F. Leary, U. S. N., who will command the cruiser; Comdr. G. N. Barker, who will be executive officer; Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton, commandant of the first naval district; Capt. D. T. Bulmer of the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard; Lieut. M. R. Greer of the Squantum aviation base; Mayor McGrth of Quincy and Traffic Commissioner Conry of Boston.

DOLLAR WORTH 77.3-10 CENTS

The commission found that the cost of living fell off approximately 1 per cent in April as compared with March.

Store Battlers

JOSEPH SAPERSTINE

JAMES PORT

BANDIT FELLED BY STORE BOSS IN A HOT FIGHT

Cambridge Manager Defies a Gun and Captures His Man by Flying Tackle

A bold daylight robbery of a Mt. Auburn st. (Cambridge) chain store, in which a shot was fired, narrowly missing Manager Joseph Saperstine, resulted in the arrest of one of two holdup men after Saperstine had given him battle.

The man was booked as Daniel Walsh, 22, of Market st., Cambridge, charged with attempt to rob while armed and assault with intent to kill Saperstine.

His companion, who obtained considerable change from the cash register, escaped in an auto.

Police said Saperstine's nerve in battling the holdup man probably saved his life, as he struck down the bandit's gun just as it was fired pointblank at his stomach.

The holdup and battle took place when a number of persons, including girl stenographers and clerks, were passing the store on their way to work.

Saperstine, who is 29 and lives in Wellington Hill st., Mattapan, was preparing to handle the day's business, assisted by Frank Leary, 18, of Putnam ave., Cambridge.

CHALLENGES BANDIT

According to police, Walsh and a companion entered the store, the former jamming a gun into Saperstine's stomach with the command:

"Put 'em up, Buddy, and give us the dough."

The second man had moved to the cash register, which contained only a few bills and some change.

Saperstine's response to the holdup man's command was prompt.

"Go to hell," he snapped, at the same time seizing the other man's gun hand. As the manager thrust down the hand, the gun exploded, a bullet ploughing into the floor at Saperstine's feet.

Instead of being frightened, Saperstine leaped on Walsh and the two began a struggle which nearly wrecked the store, in which young Leary took a hand from time to time. Armed with a large bottle he pounded Walsh on -shoulders and arms whenever they afforded a fair target.

Saperstine managed to knock the gun from Walsh's hand and one holdup man, wrenching himself loose, started for the door, through which his companion had fled when the gun was fired, after scooping up a handful of change from the cash register.

As Walsh reached the door Saperstine made a flying tackle, bringing him down with a crash.

Walsh regained his feet and reached the sidewalk, only to be seized by Patrolman Harry Bagan, who had hurried to the store at the sound of the shot.

Bagan, in his six feet one inch tall and weighs 200 pounds, pinned Walsh against the wall. Just then Inspector Francis A. McLaughlin, driving by on his way to work, saw the struggle and went to Bagan's assistance.

WELFARE CHIEF RESIGNS POST

The dispute between Mayor Duane of Waltham and Dr. Frederick L. MacDonald, public welfare director, ended today with Dr. MacDonald's suspension and his resignation.

Dr. MacDonald sent a letter of resignation to the mayor even while the latter was sending a letter notifying him he was suspended for a week.

Duane recently criticized the welfare department for its administration of city aid and Dr. MacDonald, in turn, yesterday scored the mayor for making his criticism through the press, and not directly to the director.

The mayor gave MacDonald's criticism as the cause of his suspension. Dr. MacDonald, in his letter of resignation, however, said he could not devote any more time to welfare work and care for his own practice.

BEAT DOCTOR, KIDNAP GIRL

Derby, Ct., May 21 (AP)—Dr. Royal Pinney, wealthy retired physician of New Haven, reported to police today that two men had abducted Miss Agnes O'Neil, his companion on an automobile ride, after they had beaten him severely.

The physician, a reputed millionaire, told police the attack occurred at 11:45 p. m. when he stopped his machine o na side road in Orange to enable Miss O'Neil to light a cigarette.

The bandits, one of whom was armed, dragged Dr. Pinney from his machine, beat and robbed him of his watch and $15 and then drove away with Miss O'Neil after they had thrown him into a clump of bushes.

Dr. Pinney said he walked to the main highway after regaining consciousness and was picked up by a motorist.

The physician said he became acquainted with Miss O'Neil about three weeks ago and that he knew very little about her. He estimated her age at about 22.

Police believe the bandits knew of Dr. Pinney's practice of visiting Derby to collect rents on extensive property holdings. The physician, a former Derby resident, is about 70.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

McKechnie and McGraw. Cheese It, Herr Maxie! Why Our Braves Are Up. Mister Sharkey Riled! Bill Has Them Talking. Not Stage Mad, Either.

Ever Hear of Feeding Race Horse Fish Liver?

Sometimes you're up and sometimes you're down—giddyap Napoleon! Fate rattles you around in the dice box like the dancing ivories. Look at the gang that has ridden to wealth on bootleg booze and racketeering and see the sound business men that are fighting for sheer existence. It isn't a case of keeping the wolf from the door these days. Any night now the wolf wakes up and finds an ever increasing pack of us camped on HIS doorstep. The Good Book itself says something about "The first shall be last and the last shall be first." Which rambling ratiocination may or may not have a bearing on the fact that the Giants, who the experts this Spring said were sure pennant winners, are down here sulking a few points from the basement, while our Braves, who almost unanimously were consigned to the second division, are flirting with the pennant a few points away from the lead.

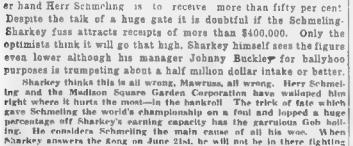
New York is inclined to take it seriously. Already the mob is beginning to howl for Jawn McGraw's gore. The manager always has to be the goat. That's what he is paid for. Sometimes the manager is to blame. Sometimes he isn't. Jr. Y. fans think Jawn McGraw, pilot of more pennant winning teams than any manager in captivity, has slipped. They say the old swashbuckling, chip-on-shoulder, fighting, scrapping "Mugsy," has lost the magic something that now lashed, now inspired, his players to the heights. In your humble scribe's opinion McGraw, while he has changed as a man with the advancing years, has not changed as a leader. He is as great a leader as ever. It is the players that have changed, and more particularly their attitude. What Bill Carrigan said when he ended his comeback as manager of the Red Sox, best explains it. Bill said a mouthful. Remember it!

"Baseball hasn't changed, but the player has," declared Bill. "The player of today has too many outside interests. Listen to their chatter in the hotel lobbies, on the street, even on the bench. It's the stock market, horse racing, golf, dancing. The old time ball player lived baseball 24 hours a day. He wouldn't talk anything else, think anything else. He ate only played it, but talked it and dreamt it. You could fight your way to victory with that type of player. Today about all a manager can do is to pick his strongest lineup and trust to luck. Firing your team don't do any good. You must fill the vacancies with the same type of player. The changed attitude of the players has made luck the prime factor in pennant winning combinations. About all a manager has to depend on these days is a prayer book and a good luck piece."

If you don't think there is something it it, why hang out with Bill McKechnie a Braves for a few hours. Those boys are talking, thinking baseball on and off the diamond. When you get the boys talking baseball, you are sure to have them playing it. And so for the love of Mike, Bill—keep 'em talking!

Whatever happens when Jack Sharkey crawls through the ropes against Max Schmeling a month hence you can look for the Garrulous Gob to put up the greatest fight of his career. And don't for one minute, folks, think this is any press agent bunk. Familiarize yourself with a few facts. Jawker Sharkey is only going to get ten per cent of the intake of the big battle. On the other hand Herr Schmeling is to receive more than fifty per cent. Despite the talk of a huge gate it is doubtful if the Schmeling-Sharkey fuss attracts receipts of more than $400,000. Only the optimists think it will go that high. Sharkey himself sees the figure even lower although his manager Johnny Buckley for ballyhoo purposes is trumpeting about a half million dollar intake or better.

Sharkey thinks this is all wrong, Mawrus, all wrong. Herr Schmeling and the Madison Square Garden Corporation have walloped him right where it hurts the most—in the hankroll. The trick of fate which gave Schmeling the world's championship on a foul and lopped a huge percentage off Sharkey's earning capacity has the garrulous Gob boiling. He considers Schmeling the main cause of all his woe. When Sharkey answers the gong on June 21st, he will not be in there fighting for the winner's share. He will be in there to wipe Schmeling off the fistic map and regain his old place in the sun—and in the money.



Every move Sharkey has made is sufficient proof that he cares nothing about the gate, nothing about the battle as an event, but is concentrating on battering the German out of his path for once and for all. In the first place he went to his Orangeburg training camp three weeks before he ordinarily would leave his Chestnut Hill home. He has refused to take part in any old time ballyhoo. The gate doesn't interest Sharkey, this time. He is only getting ten per cent. Whenever he has opened his mouth he has said things that would tend to hurt the gate, not help it. He has had Manchmaker Jimmy Johnston and the officials of the Madison Square Garden Corporation going around in circles. All Sharkey cares for now is to get Schmeling into the ring and vent his spite on him.

It will be the old-fashioned, snarling, cocky, vindictive Gob of the Harry Wills fight who will come storming into the ring at the Rickard Bowl. And Herr Schmeling will have to prove himself—every inch and ounce of him—as great as the greatest champions of old to keep the world's heavyweight championship from coming back here where it belongs.

Did you ever hear of a horse being fed anything in the meat line? Yet honest to goodness and cross our hearts, durned if a part of the daily diet of Burgoo King, winner of both Kentucky Derby and Preakness, wasn't fish liver! Burgoo King, being more of the delicate than rugged type of thoroughbreds, has been fed on fish liver for more than six months. Of course, he gets his oats, too. But the veterinarian claims that the fish liver is what has strengthened the great horse's stamina, vitality and general health. Hurry, Fritz—greve him liever!

PETROLLE WINS BLOODY FIGHT

Chicago, May 21 (US)—When an irresistible force hits an immovable object, what happens?

Well, at the Chicago Stadium they paid off on the force, represented by Billy Petrolle the Fargo Express who battered Battalino.

Battalino stayed the limit of the ten rounds, but lost the decision.

There was hardly a moment, from the sixth round on, when the bout might not have been stopped, so moving was the spectacle of Battalino, as Petrolle's punches ripped and tore the gnarled features apart.

All that Battalino had was the will to fight after the fast round in which he suffered a cracked nose. A crowd of 6570 by dropping Petrolle with a right hand smash to the jaw.

Petrolle was more than method local for four rounds, slashing and hooking until he had the battered one bleeding from cuts on the lip from his re-born nose, from a slice on the side of the head.

The United States team of women golfers swept the three foursome matches with a British side. Mrs. Collett Vare and Mrs. Opal Hill defeated Joyce Wethered and Wanda Morgan by one hole. Helen Hicks and Virginia Van Wie from Enid Wilson and Mrs. J. B. Watson two and one. Miss Maureen Orcutt and Mrs. Leona Cheney defeated Molly Gourlay and Doris Park by one hole.

Mrs Vare and Mrs. Hill adopted the strategy of sticking to Miss Wethered and waiting for her famous English star to make errors. Miss Wethered's first error one loose was at the [illegible] where she missed an 18-inch putt. Mrs. Vare squared the match.

Miss Wethered's lee shot landered at the 12th and gave the English pair lost her match at the 13th and Mrs. Vare [illegible] a beautiful shot from the rough by the American [illegible] carried it.

Boston Fans Go Wild Over Warriors

Boston has gone daffy over the Braves. There were 15,000 fans at their home-coming, now we know that many fans can and do squeeze into the spacious Tepee when there is room enough to take in all of the crowd that will want to attend the first double-header of the season tomorrow.

Proving that the Hub is still the baseball town it used to be, when it has a team worth cheering for.

The second-place Warriors can't reach the roof today but they can get very close to it if they win and the Cubs lose, as they gained a full game by taking the measure from the Phils while the Reds were nosing out the leaders, and are now trailing by less than two games.

There was no reason why the Braves couldn't be up in the first division [illegible] record-breaking week-day crowd of the fair sex and their escorts acted as though a world series was on.

The Warriors functioned like the perfectly-conditioned, smooth-working machine Manager Bill McKechnie promised to present to the customers.

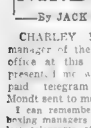
Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

CHARLEY MOONEY able manager of the Western Union office at this newspaper, has presents for me a th a 400 word paid telegram which Toots Mondt sent to me from Montreal.

I can remember the days when boxing managers used to send collect telegrams of 400 words, but I was the first time in my life I ever received a telegram of that length.



Mr. Boston

Perhaps Mondt believes in recruiting his vocabulary from Jack Washburn, who has been sending out in the mails of Boston and New York Mr. Washburn's views on the Londos-DeGlane match.

Mondt begins his telegram by calling me a liar. He just ignored Wilcox of Wesleyan University, Wilson of Springfield College and Bob Giglio Lewis and Henry DeGlane. Toots makes a rather sweeping indictment against the so-called headliners in the mat game.

I shall not keep you in suspense any longer. Here's Toots' telegram:

"Very much disappointed to announce that my next show at the Garden on May 25 had to be called off owing to the fact Jim Londos flatly refused to have any part of Gentleman Jack Washburn. Londos broke his word which only means that I will have to look elsewhere for opponents for Washburn.

"I am in Montreal discussing possibilities of a Washburn-DeGlane match for June 15 at the Garden. It seems DeGlane, like Londos, wants no part of Washburn or the $30,000 purse that I want to put up. I am leaving today for Toronto to meet Strangler Lewis to discuss possibilities of getting him to meet the bad boy there, although he never has realized that Lewis refused to discuss match while in Boston last Wednesday.

"Gentleman Jack is truly the bad man of the mat. He is postponed in London unless London has his own man in the ring which I will not stand for. Definitely fears Washburn more than he does Londos.

"LEWIS openly declares he is willing to wrestle any man living but he does not want to close for a match with Gentleman Jack What is wrong with our three championship claimants? Washburn wants and demands action, stands ready to battle any man in the world, with unlimited financial backing to support his claims that he is the best wrestler in the world today.

"I want to go on record and say that Washburn, properly conditioned, can defeat any wrestler in the world and if I don't get a yes from some of these queens that call themselves champions I am going before Mr. Tom Murphy, member of the House of Parliament and chairman of the Ontario Commission, as well as all other chairmen of the athletic commissions here in Canada and likewise in the United States, and will bill and advertise in the Boston Garden Jack Washburn as the champion of the world.

"If any worthy opponent questions Jack's wordy claims I will let them thrash it out in the ring in Boston.

"The people in Boston are entitled to the best and I have plenty of financial backing to stage the best, and our hundreds of fan mail letters prove that we proved to me that they like their wrestling rough in Boston.

"London refused. DeGlane is out and Lewis will not. My $30,000 is ready.

"Who would you suggest better than Washburn for the fourth champion" Who not put all four of them in the ring at the same time, turn them loose, let them start swinging and see who comes through Honestly would be stringing with Jack Washburn.

"What do you think" My next date at the Garden will be June 1. Will announce card later."

RECORDS FALL IN N. E. COLLEGE TRACK MEET

Brown Stadium, Providence R. I., May 21 (INS)—New Hampshire University last year's winner of the New England intercollegiate track and field championship, this afternoon annexed the honor in the 46th annual running.

Wearing the colors of the New Hampshire college, scored eight points when he won the 120-yard high hurdles in 15.3-5 seconds, breaking one of Bob Kaiser's records by a fraction of a second. Bowdoin, who finished second and third, respectively, to New Hampshire, was fourth with 23 points. Bowdoin winners were [illegible] out in the [illegible] Harvard, Williams and Worcester Tech.

[illegible] Massachusetts Tech was [illegible] with 20 points. He just missed [illegible] Wilcox of Wesleyan University, Wilson of Springfield College was third By winning the century, Bell won the Frank K Harrison trophy, Bell [illegible] 1930.

[illegible] Four weeks of the colors of 17 New England colleges participated in the two-day athletic carnival. However, most of them left by the wayside in the trial heats held yesterday.

The first record today fell when Merrill of Boston College clipped a fifth of a second off the mile mark hung up a year ago by Viles of Maine. Monahan's time for the mile was 4 minutes 22 seconds.

The Eagle flier took the lead with the gun, but Beard of Amherst dispatched it with him in the stretch. [illegible] Monahan uncorked a spurt that carried him to victory by yards.

Bernie McCafferty, Holy Cross sprinter, who had been expected to win the quarter-mile race, pulled up second in the "400" to Adams of Notre College in the fast time of 48.5 seconds. In the stretch McCafferty was running fourth, but put on the steam in time to [illegible] and was third.

The abridged record, established yesterday by Magnuson, B. U. [illegible] was short lived, for he broke it again this afternoon when he negotiated the [illegible] feet in 53.4 seconds.

He bettered the mark he made yesterday by four inches. The shot-put record had stood for seven years, having been established in 1925 by Whitney of Dartmouth, at 47 feet 10½ inches.

Still another mark fell by the wayside when Galbraith of Bowdoin heaved the hammer 130 feet 3⅞ inches, for a new meet mark.

FULLER WHIPS BERG IN TORRID BATTLE

By HYPE IGOE

New York, May 21 (INS)—Sammy Fuller threw himself pel mell into the Whitechapel Windmill last night and clipped Jackie Berger whizzing wings.

Not by much, old dears, not by much. It was that close that the 6000 spectators in Madison Square Garden stood up around the ring breathlessly watching the final three minutes and just as breathlessly awaited the verdict

There have been few more savage encounters between little men, that it was to be expected that the jury of three would cast a split vote.

Charley Mathieson voted for Berg, and George Kelley and Gunboat Smith cast their tabs for Fuller.

"I thought I won. But the others didn't," said Berg

"I never met Battling Nelson, but if he's anything like Berg, then I didn't have to know him," commented Fuller. "I don't know what holds Berg up"

Fuller probably won because of his clean shots to the body. They were devastating smashes and slowed Berg up considerably. The distance, instead of helping Berg counted against him. He weakened in the two final rounds, and Fuller clinched victory in th se rounds

Fuller usually backed away as he waited for Berg's rushes. Then he'd shoot stiff rights for Jackie's head Berg outfought Sammy at close range.

Fuller got to Berg's body in the third, a sizzling round

Jackie took his thrashing like a sport, and came back splendidly in the sixth to rip Sammy's eye wide open Berg complained about low blows in the eighth, but in the seventh he came out to make a great finish. A right almost floored Berg in the final round.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox conclude a four-game series with the champion Athletics with a double-header in Philadelphia this afternoon. They'll have no cause to cheer about it, though, as they must go to Washington tomorrow.

Vernon "Lefty" Gomez led the Yankees to their second victory in seven starts against the Senators. The final score was 6 to 3 and the victory put the McCarthymen one-half game of the Solons in the race for the American League attic.

Cleveland remained in third place by whipping the Browns, 11 to 7, and Detroit stayed right on the heels of the Peckmen by scoring an 8 to 6 triumph over the White Sox when Jack Stone hit a home run in the 11th inning.

Andy High, pinch-hitter extraordinary, provided the blow which gave the Reds a 3 to 2 11-inning victory over the league-leading Cubs. Coming to bat with the Homeyemen one run behind, two on and two out, Handy Andy belted out a double which sent both runners home. Babe Herman forced the game into overtime with a homer in the ninth.

The Giants, in seventh place two days back, are now in fifth as a result of whipping the Dodgers, 8 to 4, while the Braves were beating the Phils. Both Hack Wilson and Travis Jackson came through with home runs in the contest.

Larry French Pirates' star southpaw, held the world's champion Cardinals to two hits and the Bucs turned in a 5 to 0 win to go into a virtual tie with Brooklyn for seventh place

Rabbi Maranville and Bernie Friberg, Lynn boy with th Phils, were observed taking advantage of the rescinding of the non-talking rule by the National League Both players greeted friends sitting in boxes.

A charity exhibition game between the Red Sox and Braves at the Allston wigwam, June 28, was arranged yesterday at a conference between Judge Fuchs, Tribal president, and Mayor Curley at City Hall.

The program will be similar to that at last year's game between the two Boston major league teams —the members of the two squads engaging in ba.. and field athletics in addition to playing the game.

W. G. A. TITLE PLAY OPENS MONDAY

By BILL GRIMES

With its usual large entry, the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts conducts its annual championship at the Andover Country Club, starting with an 18-hole qualifying round on Monday.

Although many players who stood out prominently at Brae Burn last season for various reasons have not entered this year's championship, sufficient class remains to offer plenty of competition. There will be the usual number of upsets which feature W. G. A. titular events.

Miss Rosamond Vahey, Belmont Spring, is the defending champion and the field includes former champions Miss Dorothy Richards, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., Oakley; Mrs. F. C. Stone, Belmont Spring; Mrs. Donald M. Belcher, Winchester, and Miss Margaret Curtis, Essex County.

Eight of last year's qualifiers will be on previous only as the absence Mrs. Irving P. Pennimen, jr., Charles River, and Mrs. W. C. Quimby, The Country Club, have been on the sick list all season and can't play at Andover.

Miss Eleanor Peirce, Oakley, who broke into the headlines by defeating Mrs. Pennimen in the first round of match play and followed with a victory over Miss E. H. Baker in the next day, has forsaken golf for business. Her sister Winifred, the baby of the field, who not only qualified but won her first match, has not participated in any matches this spring.

Two Young Stars May Cause Upsets

Miss Ruth Ratchelder, a semi finalist at Brae Burn, is in England as is Mr. W. M. Ferris, jr., who, although she did not play last year, is one of the leading golfers of the association. Mrs. Virginia Hodder Martin, Brae Burn; Mrs. George L. Wrenn, 2d., Dedham; Mr. Harry Peterson Winchester and Mrs. F. W. Davis, Weston, have also passed up this year's championship.

There are two youngsters who will bear watching at Andover, namely, Miss Deborah Verry, Kittanett and Miss Mary Parkinson, Dedham. Although the chances of either Miss Verry or Miss Parkinson winning are remote, the two are liable to cause a few upsets.

Miss Verry and Miss Parkinson are two of the craftiest hitters in the association. They possess powerful physiques are fortified with fine temperaments and are born competitors.

Miss Verry will make her championship debut at Andover. She played her first season of competitive golf this spring with the championship Southern District during which she won four of her six matches.

Andover faces the long hitters and for that reason Miss Verry and Miss Parkinson will be dangerous in match play, especially if they are fortunate enough to gain confidence by getting through their first round matches.

Although Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr. has not held the W. G. A. title for two years, she is by no means out of the running. It will not be surprising if she should stage a comeback next week and win the championship for the seventh time.

How I Got My Start In Baseball

By WES SCHULMERICH
(Braves Outfielder)
As Told to Joe Cashman

I entered pro ball after a vacation and remained in it to reach the big leagues.

I played ball at Oregon State University but I had no intention of sticking to the game after finishing my education. I was in business school and intended to enter some business as soon as I completed my course.

Wes Schulmerich

When graduation time rolled around however I felt the need of a vacation before settling down to work and when Ralph Coleman, baseball coach at Oregon State, offered me a chance to spend the summer playing for Butte, in the Montana Mines League, I accepted it.

Then, just before the close of the season, I was purchased by the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. At first I was doing a good report, but I finally decided that I might well spend a few weeks o' my vacation in "movie land."

When the campaign closed, I went home intending to stay there, but I couldn't turn down the salary offered in the contract sent to me by Los Angeles the following spring, so I tossed aside all my ambitions to be a big figure in the business world and decided on baseball as a career.

Boston Ring Fan Tells of Vets

By RAMON RUNYON

New York, May 21 (US)—What's become of those old time New England fighters I used to read about when I was a little boy?" I asked the man from Boston.

"When you was a little boy?" he repeated, inanitingly. "Why, when you was a boy you would have been reading of John L. Sullivan and his fight with Jake Kilrain at Richburg, Mississippi. Did I say reading of it? Maybe you were writing of it.

"Sullivan, greatest of the fighting New Englanders, is dead, of course. Kilrain is a watchman at Fore River. He is 71 years old and not only never goes to a fight, but even declines to talk about fighting. He was in good health the last I heard. Jimmy Walsh is head salesman in Boston for a cigar firm, and has a son in the Annapolis Naval Academy.

Sullivan Twins in Contracting Game

"The Sullivan twins, Mike and Jack, are in the contracting business at Cambridge. Mike was a welterweight with a left hand that could split a hair, and Jack was a rough and-ready heavy.

"Lemme see, now. Honey Boy Finnegan is a court officer. Kid Goodman is a jail officer. Phil Powers is around Boston, but I don't know his occupation. Johnny Wilson the former middleweight champion, is also living in our town doing this and that.

"Chester Goodwin is a brick layer. Con O'Kelly, the Irish heavyweight, is managing a chain grocery store in Dorchester. Tommy Rawson, an oldtime featherweight, is a contractor. He has money, and a son of his has taken up boxing. Tommy Robson, the old middleweight, is a cafe man in Malden, Mass.

"Pal Reed graduated from the New Hampshire State University, working his way through as a boxing instructor, and is out around Milwaukee. Nate Seigel and Red Chapman are living in Boston.

Shevlin, Lamar College Instructors

"Young Kirby married a girl down Hyannis way, and lives among the idle rich. His right name is Tommy Cochran. Eddie Shevlin is boxing instructor at Dartmouth, is a bachelor and has plenty of money. Henry Lamar, who fought out of Boston, is boxing instructor at Harvard.

"Johnny Donovan is a clerk for the district attorney in Boston. Billy Nixon, who also fought Nelson, is a special officer in Cambridge. Dave Deshler is an instructor at Kelly and Hayes' gymnasium. Porky Flynn is a walking delegate for the iron workers.

"Eddie Carr, Honeyboy Finnegan's father-in-law, who used to fight Jimmy Walsh about every Tuesday night, is a watchman. Johnny Powers is a plumber in South Boston.

"Billy Glover is boxing instructor at West Point. Phil Schlossberg is a manager. Gilbert Gallant is around Chelsea.

"Henry Myers and Billy Myers are both in Boston, the latter connected with the circulation department of the American.

"I'll think of some the next time I comes to New York," said the man from Boston.

EQUIPOISE IN BELMONT RACE

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 21 (US)—Equipoise, which has returned to the races in a glorious fashion, will have an opportunity to add to his honors by winning the Metropolitan handicap today.

The Whitney star can easily do this weight and he points demonstrated in winning the Tobogg'n that he can whirl along. The distance of one mile will be greatly in his favor.

Wallace to Make Ring Bow at Salem

Harry "Kid" Wallace of Philadelphia will make his local bow in an eight round bout with Red Griffen of Beverly at Salem on Monday evening.

Wallace is now under the management of Tommy McFarland of this city. In the 10 round main bout Tony Aquaro of Lynn and Eddie "Kid" Sullivan of Walpole clash.

Dust Not to Bother Brockton Racers

Brockton's half-mile track will be made as dustless as possible through application of calcium chloride, so that the May 30 AAA auto races can be run under ideal track conditions.

WALTHAM MAN, TAXPAYER FOR 29 YEARS, VICTIM OF GOUGING RACKET

This is the 20th in a series of articles exposing the tax collection racket, a form of legalized extortion which is fattening the pockets of constables and victimizing reputable citizens of Massachusetts.

'Operator" of Roslindale says he gave $50 to the unemployment fund but that as the result of an experience with a tax collector he double that he will be as generous in any future public emergency.

A Waltham citizen, long out of work, was charged $4 extra on a 52 excise tax and became so angry that the constable lopped off a dollar. But that didn't appease the taxpayer, who had been paying taxes in that city for 29 years.

"As usual," writes "Operator," who gives his name and address, "the Boston American is first to take up these items that oppress the individual known as 'Mr. Average Citizen.'

"Last year I lost about 50 per cent of my salary through illness. There were many bills that I pigeon-holed for a while until I could get back to work and recoup my losses.

"One of these bills was my State, 1931, income tax for $50.66. On April 16 I received a letter from Andrew W. Murphy, 40 Court st., room 1226, to appear at his office the next day with the $30.66, 55 cents costs, 90 cents interest and $6.30 as his fee.

"I visited his office on April 15 and questioned him as to his $6.30 fee. I explained that all he did was to write a letter and that I appeared, that he did not have to travel or put himself out. He said he had a warrant and unless I paid he would proceed with it and gave me no explanation as to what the $6.30 included outside of the cost of the warrant.

"I asked him for one month in which to pay and he advised me that if I put up a bond or other collateral he would do it, otherwise I could have a week.

"And so, the $6.30 legalized holdup has been paid and I am one who gave $50 out of my salary to the unemployed this year.

"It sort of disillusions a good citizen to be treated in this manner as the sting will remain and in future community emergencies I am not apt to be so generous.

"Mr. Murphy knew that I worked for one of the largest amusement companies in the world and that I am a high salaried man. He might have given the time I asked for without any risk whatever, but I suppose the greed for his $6.30 was too strong."

Here's a complaint from Waltham:

"I have read about the tax racketeers in the Boston American. I think you ought to get a lot of letters from Waltham. When I got home one night my wife said 'You've got a warrant for your excise tax of $4 on your car and $1.50, and you must pay it in five days. I went to the sheriff and said, 'What does this mean?' He said, 'If you don't pay it you will go to jail.'

"To make the story short, I have been paying taxes for 29 years, and always paid my bills, but this was the meanest thing that ever happened. I have been out of work all winter—scanned get a job. All I can do is to go to City Hall in Waltham, and get three days' work every two weeks at $3 a day).

"I worked 16 years on the Boston & Albany, until a strike on 54 roads made us lose our positions. The constable's name is Peter McGann, 84 Church st., Waltham. The bill was $3 and he charged me $4 and took off a dollar when I got mad with him.

"Something should be done to stop this. It isn't right to take money from us that way."

The writer asked that his name be omitted.

Another instalment on the tax collection racket will be published in the Boston Evening American Monday.

SABBATH RADIO OFFERINGS BRIGHT

By N. F. T.

Between now and Monday there are some doings of at least passing interest on the air. Among these may be found an occasion of sufficient merit to cause postponement of that proposed Sunday ride in the new (or old) family bus. Then, of course, there is always the possibility of rain—ugh!

ALL STAR ARRAY

In the event dinner isn't over, a rather unusual program can be tuned in (WAAB) between 4:30 and 5:30 tomorrow. Movie stars galore will be featured and the full hour comes all the way across North America from California. Mr. Will Rogers leads these photoplay performers, holding forth as a sort of unofficial master of ceremonies. Will knows more than many about such duty and the Rogers brand of humor is generally conceded to be equally as fine in quality as pieces of silverware bearing the same name. It's all about the forthcoming Olympic games. Talkie celebrities from foreign lands are sending out urgent invitations via radio, each speaking to the native element of their own respective countries. They line up as follows:

ALL NATIONS APPEAL

Marlene Dietrich talks to Germany. Delores Del Rio addresses Spain. Bela (Dracula) Lugosi will speak Hungarian. Olga Baclanova has a message for Russia. Claudette Colbert sounds a French note. Why not Maurice Chevalier we wonder? Maureen O'Sullivan of course could hardly recommend anything to any country so sincerely as to Emerald Islanders. Jean Hersholt says it to Scandinavia, with Laurel and Hardy elowning for subjects of England's Kingdom. All in all, the 60 minutes should be quite worth while.

* * *

Governor Rolph of the sunny West Coast State (Florida press please copy) is being introduced for a few remarks before it's all over.

* * *

Jack Pearl, Francis White and Syd Gary are among the cast heard in Ziegfeld Follies of The Air tomorrow night (WNAC) at 9:30. Will Rogers is not included this week because of rumored dissension in connection with relaying his voice from Hollywood.

Twenty voices rise in sacred vocal melody tomorrow afternoon (WNAC) at 4 o'clock. Brown University choir men broadcast via Yankee Network stations under Arthur Hitchcock direction.

LOCAL LATHER

Forgive Fitzgibbon. Forgive! That splendid effort this morning inspires an idea for suggesting what a lot of radio folk may be doing ten years from NOW—including Steve. All of which subscribers should look for here on Monday... Latest report on the new radio school mentioned here some days back, is that plans are in motion for a June 1st opening at 20 Newbury st. Don't try to prove it by your Uncle N. F. T. until he sees it . . . Electrical Transcription (recordings to most of us) become increasingly noticeable lately . . . Theater men were considerably exercised hereabouts on Wednesday and Thursday as seeming difficulty surrounded Kate Smith coming Hubward for a personal appearance. It seems her commercial program now going out from New York would have to be piped into the big city from here and that means a tidy sum for telephone line charges. Local studio rental costs something also, so when the Columbia Broadcasting System bosses, Theater execs. and Kate herself find out who is to pay expenses attending her sponsored tri-weekly network efforts, then will said footlight turn in Boston be definite. High hope has been held that the big gal would follow Ben Bernie as headline RKO-Keith Theater attraction, meaning Saturday, June 4th . . . She might at that. Rubbing both peepers followed sudden surprise at sight of Lew Conrad shaking hands in a farewell gesture to a brother baton boy named Micky Alpert. Both held forth in most friendly fashion along Tremont st. the other night and little Lew is now en route to his new Pittsburgh hotel dance band job . . . Phone calls were plentiful when someone told some one else about hearing how Betty Gow, the Lindbergh nursemaid, had committed suicide. One or two good folks insisted they had heard it on their radio receivers. Not one however, knew what station through which they obtained such word. If anyone actually did hear anything of the sort, two of those talkative amateurs gabbing at random about the case on the air, is the only imaginable explanation.

Personalities of the Air

Plans to b'dcast radio p'grams on the Boston Common during the summer were completed yest'y.

Where will the pigeons go for peace and quiet now?

B'dcasts will be heard from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. And there's no slumber music on them to soothe the sleeping gentry on the green.

Radio is everywhere. Before you know people in the homes will be tuning in again.

The Pop Concerts will be NBCed and WBZed each Wed. during the summer to start June 1 . . . Insomniacs will be deprived an hr. of dance music beginning Mon. when WNAC will start closing up shop at 1 a. m. rather than 2 . . . That thing Russ Columbo uses for a baton is a tin piccolo. And can Russ play it! . . . $3500 fee to Will Rogers and a huge quantity more for a wire to Hollywood is the reason the humorist won't be on the Ziegfeld p'gram tomorrow . . . When you hear that p'gram tomorrow head the sweet croonings of Sid Gary. Sid is an ex-double for a dog in the movies . . . WBZ's narrator Ray Meyers has signed with NBC Artists Bureau, and may be be networked anytime now.

In another scientific b'dcast Mon. NBC will air the noises of tearing cloth, trolley cars and sirens.

If this sort of thing keeps up, noises of breaking radio sets will overshadow all other sounds.

The average monthly cost of running an average radio station varies between $1500 and $3000, says Natl. B'dcasting Reporter . . . WEEI's Today and Yesterday daily series has been cancelled . . . WNAC Announcer Merril Madden has been through 3 shipwrecks. Won-der if he finds anything any worse . . . When the Mayfair orch., heard regularly on WNAC, b'dcast on WBZ, air activities with the first two mentioned came to an end. Now, Herb Marsh, whose orch. is a WNAC-WAAB feature, is WBZed at 4 today. Does history repeat itself? . . . Unreliable Spy No. 00½ is in again with word that Guy Lombardo was squelched recently when a music publisher told him to save his money because "some day a guy will add a flute to his orch., and you'll be just another orch. leader." . . . Russ Columbo is doing so well at his N. Y. night club that when Buddy Rogers came in one eve.—as honored guest—there wasn't a table to be had for him.

COOK-COOS

"Be Kind to Policemen" is the slogan just adopted by Evanston, Ill., in an effort to restore good natured conduct on the part of arresting officers.

Scenes like this will soon be a daily occurrence—

Motor Cop—"Ah, there! Not so fast. Curb, please—if you don't mind."

Motorist—"You've caught me now. It reminds me of a story . . ." (They whisper and laugh.)

Cop—"Seriously, you were going rapidly. That old lady you knocked down is as mad as a wet hen."

Motorist—"Tell her to forget about it."

Cop—"I told her not to be a fuss-cat."

Motorist—"By the way, what is your name?"

Cop—"Just call me Pal."

Motorist—"And you call me 'J. D.' That's what everybody calls me."

Cop—"By the way, 'J. D.,' where did you get that tie? It's becoming."

Motorist—"Here, take it. (Rips off tie.) And can you and the wife and kiddies come over for dinner tonight?"

Cop—"I suppose we can. But I haven't got a thing to wear."

Cop—"Flatterer."

Motorist—"Six-thirty. Here's the address. We'll sit around and talk over the charge and perhaps make some popcorn."

C.—"Bye-bye."

M.—"Don't forget."

Carter's Wife Knows That He Has Fallen in Love With Nevis Lancaster

"FRAID," said Mrs. Carter, "Harry'll come a cropper this time." She met Nevis at a bridge in town and liked her.

"Nice little thing," said Mrs. Carter, "and pretty as the devil." But she told herself: "Harry's slipping. It won't be long now. He's got to settle down sometime. This is the first time I've known him to pick a filly." Married, of course, but recently so mad in love with her husband, however. Or so rumor said.

Kay Carter was not a martyred wife at all. In her own fashion she enjoyed life immensely. Conscious since girlhood of her own lack of purely feminine allure she had accustomed herself to it, not without, perhaps, heartache and tears in the old days. But no longer. And she had, she told herself repeatedly, the best of Harry. The best. She had his son., his sincerely devoted concern and his unalterable friendship. The best, she thought, watching the merry-go-round of Manhattan and other places, the best, possibly, of any man. And possibly she was right.

In the late spring several things happened. The first one was that Nevis saw Olive Blanchard in Bill's arms.

It was at the opening of the club. A dance . . . and dinners before . . . cocktail parties before that. Bill had had too much to drink. So, it may be, had Olive.

He was, as he afterwards if unnecessarily admitted, only human. A man desires, of course, his right of selection. But Olive had never been unattractive to him and he was no more immune to the not very subtle flattery of knowing himself the object of the race, the end of the hunt, than is any other male person. Nevis? He loved Nevis. This was different. But his and Nevis' love was all cluttered up with the dulling domesticities, the usual arguments, the quarrels, the ceaseless talk of expenditures, ways and means, the household routine. Olive was not concerned with, or in, his. She was sheer woman, offering herself, if not openly then quite openly enough. He hadn't the remotest idea how she ran her house, what she spent on her clothes, how she looked with her make-up off and her hair dishevelled. He had never seen her with a cold in her head, a pain in her tummy or in the throes of a bilious attack. As far as he knew, she was always as he saw her, detached from the commonplace of every-day living, ingeniously gowned, heavily touched with perfume, murmurous and at times enticing.

The night of the club dance was such a time.

Nevis, stumbling on the two of them, stepped back into the arms of Harry Carter who was followed her. She said: "Oh!" and put her hand to her throat in the immemorial gesture of stricken women. Carter asked: "What is it?" and she answered, quickly, her control returning: "Nothing. Some people. It doesn't matter. Let's go out the other way." So she had led and he had followed but not without a swift backward glance at the cause, or causes, of Nevis' disturbance. He did not see clearly but he saw enough to put one and one together and get Olive and Bill. He thought, watching Nevis during the hours which followed, observing her almost hysterical gaiety: "Old stuff, terribly old stuff. But it serves."

And if Nevis, during the moonlight dance when the lights were out and only a small mischievous baby spotlight wandered about the floor, picking out now this couple and now that; if Nevis permitted him to bend his tall head and touch his lips lightly and casually to her cheek, he knew why; he knew it was because of her resentment and the childish desire to get even. Not that that evened things, but it was a beginning.

It wasn't due, he knew ruefully, to any great charm in himself. But that he had charm, for women, he knew quite as well. No use rushing things. Nevis was used to him now. She considered him her friend; had told him so. Liked being with him; had told him that. Laughed at and with him, argued hotly on any known or unknown subject and was completely at home with him. A rather bitter dose to accept. But medicinal. He knew, however, that a woman may become accustomed to a man, find him as easy as an old shoe and then one day regard him with altered and startled eyes as a stranger—an interesting stranger, the sort the fortune tellers whisper about.

"A tall, dark man is coming into your life, little lady."

More often than not the tall, dark man has been there for a long time, only so familiar an object had he become that you just didn't see him.

It was only fair that Nevis taxed Bill with what she had seen on the club veranda, and taxed him in no uncertain terms. She was no inhuman heroine to suffer in silence and to argue that "he will come back to me. She left that to older women, to women like Kay Carter, who didn't as it happened, care very much for one certain phase of a man's devotion and, so, were content to let that phase go elsewhere for ephemeral warmth and comfort and to retain for themselves the things which they found more important.

Bill responded in the routine manner. First by an angry denial, working himself up into a magnificent rage of reproach and pronouncing himself not guilty in a ringing and entirely too sincerely innocent voice. And then, of course, by stepping out of the witness box and taking his strong right—or is it left?—hand from the matrimonial Bible and admitting his sin. But not remorsefully. Rather take-it-or-leave-it, rather with defiance. "Yes, I did and what are you going to do about it?" And adding a few categorical cold facts in case Nevis, at the breakfast table, with Hari whispering to Kari in the pantry, had never heard of them before. Such as: "Men were men and women were women," which was open to argument but got by. And such as: "Drinks were drinks and a lot goes on on club verandas which is all in the spirit of modern times and good, clean fun." And such as: "Boys will be boys and why not?" And, most effective of all: "Besides, it didn't mean a so-and-so thing."

She had that to think about.

Tears, of course, on her part, and remorse at last on his. And promises. "It will never happen again, darling. Nevis, you know I don't give a tinker's damn for any woman in the world but yourself."

Reconciliation. The triumph of sacred over profane love.

Only, she didn't forget. Only, she saw all about her, much the same sort of thing happening. Not with the Hunts. They were, she decided, happy as clams. Not, perhaps, with the Carlyles, though she wasn't awfully sure. But with lots of others. It wasn't a crime to kiss another woman's husband or another man's wife. Sometimes it led to a sort of all-change-partners arrangement. Sometimes it did not. However——

Well, perhaps it didn't mean anything. Bill appeared to love her as much as ever and Olive did not drop her eyes before her steady gaze the next time they met She grew to think perhaps it didn't mean anything at all, the whole addled arrangement . . .

Bill had his own private office, now. Once, when Nevis was in town and was waiting for him to take her to lunch, she answered the telephone on his desk, the secretary being momentarily absent. "Bill?" asked Olive in her ear.

"No. Nevis."

Olive was not abashed. She had come up, she said, and wondered if Bill would feed her.

"Grand you're here too, why didn't you tell me? We could have come together. We'll all lunch."

They did.

Then Bill began to get careless about letters. Nevis found them in his bureau, in the suit she was sending to the cleaners. Not letters exactly. Quotations, mostly, from the more outspoken poets. There was one which settled it—in Nevis' mind.

Nevis finds poetry on love among Bill's effects. What she does is interestingly told in Monday's installment.

TURN BACKWARD, O TIME!

FASHION HAS genially let out her seams an inch or so to allow Glorietta and Gerry a rounder figure than of yore. But she has stopped there. "So far and no farther!" She has not let out her belt one single hole. And there is no peace and pride for the lady who is too stout now, any more than ever there was!

Can you get your arms in last year's sleeves? Your torso in last year's waist? You can't? Then this year's has to be a 20 instead of an 18, and your unrest has begun! To step up onto the bathroom scales and find the pointer flicking up to 140, when last year it was 125. What woe! And then to toddle over to the doctor and find his scales, glittering, weighted, competent, marking you up five more pounds than your own did! With everything off but the necessities. To know that your work keeps you at a desk eight hours a day with you getting bigger! And the horseback rides, the tennis, the walks that would be good medicine impossible. Oh, woe!

Big Betty decides because of these wicked conditions to hunt up a gym with a hard-hearted trainer, and step out there instead of to the movies on a soft May night. To eat greens and raisins, nuts and fruit, and forswear those lovely creamed potatoes and hot muffins and gravy.

And usually Big Betty doesn't! She loves potatoes, and the movies are more fun and MUCH "comfortabler." And her hours alone with herself and her figure are mournful and lone-spirited, and her world seems to be beset with a myriad of girls hurrying, grinning sweetly, by, with figures like a dryad, a nymph, a fiery, birch tree!

Once Betty was like that. And the burden of her song is "Backward, turn backward, O time, in your flight! And give me a 24-inch waist again, without going hungry."

Heart Murmur in the Child

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

WE OCCASIONALLY hear a mother say that her child has a "murmur" or "leak" of the heart. She restrains the youngster from indulging in strenuous and exciting play, and the child grows up believing he is an invalid for the rest of his life. This is an unfortunate state of affairs.

Dr. Copeland

A murmur is an abnormal heart sound. There are two types of murmurs. One is spoken of as a "functional murmur," and this is rarely a sign of any serious trouble with the heart, while an "organic murmur" is heard in a diseased heart, damaged by some infection.

Functional murmurs are common among children. Eight to ten per cent of all children have murmurs at some time or at other. Very often a functional murmur may be present for a time, and as the child grows older the murmur disappears.

An organic murmur is usually the result of an infectious disease in childhood. Acute rheumatic fever is the most common cause of this disturbance, while pneumonia, scarlet fever, diphtheria or other infectious diseases may involve the heart and cause an organic murmur.

When this complication occurs during or immediately after an illness complete rest in bed and restriction of exercise are imperative. Restrictions can be removed when it is determined that the heart is functioning properly and that no signs of acute infection are present. This can only be decided by the physician.

Too often children with functional murmurs are made to suffer mentally and physically. If you have been told that your child has a murmur inquire as to whether it is organic or functional. If it is a functional murmur there is no need for alarm. Even if it is organic it may not be serious.

The child should not be made to suffer by restricting its play and exercise. Bear in mind that making an invalid of a child can cause more harm than the disease itself. Many individuals with functional murmurs, as well as organic murmurs, have carried on long, full and active lives.

MARRIAGE last a complete failure these days until the last of the breakable wedding presents has been smashed in a bridge argument.

Few things can cause more unhappiness in the family circle than this constant "nagging" by some member of the family who sets himself or herself up as Perfection. It takes from the family that most live-able-with and healing of virtues—pleasant-ness.

How to Stock the Pantry

By MARTHA LEE

IS ANYTHING more maddening, when you've started out to do a morning of heavy baking, than to find that several staples such as seasoning or spice, or confectioner's sugar, is A. W. O. L.?

Cake or pastry flour, bread flour, pancake flour, graham flour; baking powder, soda, cream of tartar; vegetable shortening; white or black pepper, cayenne, paprika, ground allspice, a few bay leaves in a jar, ground cinnamon, ground and whole cloves, ground ginger, mace, nutmeg and curry powder; poultry seasoning, dry mustard, Worcestershire; granulated, brown, confectioner's, powdered and loaf sugar; vinegar, cornstarch; granulated gelatine; flavored gelatine dessert powders; quick-cooking tapioca; molasses, corn syrup, maple syrup; bouillon cubes, or beef or vegetable extract; catchup, chili sauce; coffee, tea, cocoa, chocolate; macaroni, spaghetti, rice; marshmallow creme; peanut butter; raisins; breakfast cereals; food coloring, flavoring extracts; packaged cocoanut; celery salt, onion salt; salad oil, prepared mustard.

FOR THE EMERGENCY SHELF—Evaporated milk, condensed milk; cooked spaghetti; canned baked beans; cranberry sauce; tomato juice; canned meats, fish, fruits, vegetables, and soups; dried fruits; cheese; jellies and jams; crackers and cookies; salad dressing, bottled soft drinks; olives; sandwich spreads; prepared dessert powders; pie crust fillings; pie crust; canned Chinese food products; canned plum pudding, jar of mince meat and jar of marmalade.

Flavoring has so much to do with the success of cookery that we can't be too particular in buying spices, seasonings and flavorings. And buy as wide a selection of these as your budget allows. Onion salt, celery salt and paprika are the backbone of much of the cookery in the Martha Lee Cooking School, with mustard and Worcestershire a close second. Bouillon cubes add color and flavor to pale gravy. A little cooking sherry will do wonders with any creamed dish such as Chicken a la King, Lobster Newburg or Stewed Mushrooms.

* You'll want powdered sugar for sweetening summer berries and fruits, but never to use in frostings. For them nothing but confectioner's sugar, unless they are the boiled kind, which call for ordinary granulated sugar.

And now that we have our groceries purchased, let's arrange them just as attractively as possible. Once food packages have been opened, the contents should be kept in covered jars or tins, and be sure to have the ones that are used daily well in the front of the shelf within easy reach.

Daily True Story

Signal of Flowers

SMILING PAT CAREY had known in his heart that something was wrong between him and Nan for two weeks. Nan was reserved, almost cold.

So tonight he determined to have it out. If she refused to go with him to the dance at Rainbow Hall, something of an event in their set, then the worst had come.

Pat decided not to beat about the bush. "Well," he said, "how about it, Nan—am I taking you to the dance tonight, or——"

Nan hesitated only an instant. "Sorry, Pat," she explained, "but I'm going with Mr. Laforde. You see, I've got to stand in with such an important person as an assistant to the manager. You know how it is," she added defensively.

"Yeh, answered Pat disconsolately. "I see. Well, anyway, Nan, I sent you a nice bunch of spring flowers. Hope you'll wear 'em for old times' sake."

"But," returned Nan, "I've got to wear Mr. Laforde's flowers, haven't I? He's sending roses."

That night Pat went to bed early, hoping that the anodyne of sleep would wipe out his bitter memories. But sleep was not for Pat.

"Guess I'd better walk it off," he said to himself finally. Dressing quickly, he slipped down the stairs and out into the dimly lighted street.

Wrestling with his bitter thoughts, scarcely aware of where his feet were taking him, Pat came suddenly to himself at a familiar corner, Sixth and Willow ave. Nan lived down the avenue. Had a room in Mrs. Riley's second floor.

At Pat gazed down the avenue he came suddenly to life. He wondered why he had not noticed the din before. Four blocks down was Mrs. Riley's. That fire must be near her place. Pat started on a dead run.

"Nan! Nan!" he called wildly.

"I told you! I told you!" screamed Pat. "Nan's up there yet. She couldn't make herself heard in this bedlam. So she threw out the flowers. It's a signal. Lemme up a ladder."

With the girl's head swathed in a covering, they crawled down the ladder in a protective spray and laid the unconscious Nan upon a basket at a safe distance from the turmoil. An ambulance doctor went over her quickly while Pat stood watching with his heart in his mouth.

"She'll be all right," he cried.

"I—I was choking," said Nan faintly. "I couldn't make anyone hear in all the noise. I stumbled and fell. I got up and reached the dresser. Your flowers were there, Pat. The last thing I remember is that I threw them from the window. I'm so glad you came, Pat, dear. And I—I'm so sorry, I——"

Then she fainted again as Pat knelt down, gathered her in his arms and cried for the doctor he had brushed aside.

GAS 9½ CENTS IN NEW YORK

New York, May 21 (AP)—A drastic reduction in gasoline prices in the New York metropolitan area, beginning today, was announced by th eStandard Oil Co. of New York.

The new rates put the cost of fuel at 9½ cents a gallon at service stations. This is a drop of 6 cents a gallon. Tank wagon prices also have also been cut 2 cents a gallon. The lower rates do not include the state tax of 3 cents a gallon.

Officials of the Standard Company declined to comment but it was understood the move was rendered because of price cutting by independent stations. These stations have been operating on 8 cent margin and have been able to undersell the Standard companies at a profit.
